Chihli Forces Are Crushed In Battle With 'Christian General'

ADMISSION OF INCENDIARISM IS OBTAINED BY LAWYERS

Charges Are Brought Against Three In Mixed Court

PLOT UNCOVERED

Evidence Is Obtained After Four Years Investigation

Investigations extending over a period of almost four years into the Taels 6,500,000 godown fire at the corner of North Thibet and North Soochow roads on the night of March 11, 1921, the costliest conflagration in Shanghai's history, reached a sensational climax in the Mixed Court yesterday when three Chinese were arraigned on charges of conspiracy to defraud and conspiracy to commit arson.

Two of the three men are said to have confessed their part in a widespread plot which is alleged to have resulted in the destruction of the godowns. The Court ordered all three men held under remand for a special hearing, which, it is understood, is to be held within the next two weeks. Application for bail, made by Dr. O. Fischer, representing one of the accused, was denied.

Suspicion of incendiarism has attached to the conflagration from the first, but no tangible evidence could be obtained, and after a delay of seven or eight months, during which investigations were conducted, the various insurance firms doing business in Shanghai, practically all of whom had issued policies in varying amounts on cargo stored in the godowns, paid to the insured a total of approximately $6,500,000.

LAWYERS GET CONFESSIONS

The insurance companies, however, were still unsatisfied as to the origin of the outbreak, and acting in cooperation with the police, have continued their investigations ever since. No positive results were obtained, until quite recently, when members of the law firm of Faison and Heath 19 Kiukiang Road, who are representing the insurance companies in the matter, working in conjunction with Detective Sub-Inspector Yorke, of Hongkew Station, obtained admissions from one of the Chinese involved which resulted in a complete disclosure of the alleged conspiracy. Subsequently, statements in support of this man's story were obtained from two other Chinese, one of whom, however, has since fled.

The men arraigned at the Mixed Court yesterday were Foong Mei-soong and Dah Ah-kung, coolies, and Siaou Kwen-sung, godown keeper. Foong and Dah are said to have made confessions in which they implicated Siaou as having hired them.

Mr. P. F. Faison, of the firm of Faison and Heath, appeared for the prosecution on behalf of the insurance companies and requested that the men be remanded in custody, which was granted by the Court.

The complete story of the alleged conspiracy, as related in the men, is a highly involved affair and contains serious allegations of fraud and conspiracy against persons who were said to have had cargo to the total value of $690,000 stowed in one of the godowns.

COOLIDGE HOLDS LEAD ON EVE OF U. S. ELECTIONS

All Signs Point To Landslide Despite Campaign Of Vilification

BY J. J. UNDERWOOD

(Special Cable to THE CHINA PRESS)

Washington, Nov. 2.—With the national elections the day after tomorrow, there is an increase, if anything, in the popular certainty that President Calvin Coolidge will have an easy victory.

The odds today were ten to one that Coolidge would win, and one to eighteen that La Follette would be elected. Iowa and Minnesota are considered to be the only doubtful Northern states for the Republicans.

(Reuter's American Service)

New York, Nov. 2.—On the eve of the presidential election President Coolidge is favorite. The odds are 9 to 1. Nobody can be found positively to pronounce on the chances of ex-Ambassador Davis, the Democratic candidate, or of Senator La Follette, the Progressive.

A campaign of vilification is growing, which, coupled with the use of the wireless and the cinema to reach the voters, has aroused unprecedented public interest. A record vote is expected, as registration throughout the country is the biggest ever made.

The charges of graft and references to the oil scandals do not appear greatly to have moved the multitude.

Liuho, Sadly Devastated, Yields Manna For Gang Of Homeless Refugees

Stricken Residents Gather Up Unexploded Rifle Shells For Sale; Once Prosperous City Is Now But A Pile Of Stones

BY IRENE CORBALLY KUHN

China's devastated area around Liuho, swept bare by the destruction of shellfire and arson, is nevertheless yielding a means of subsistence to many of its returned refugees. In no country but China would you find whole families raking shell-torn ground with every available instrument at hand, in a search for "duds." These unexploded rifle shells are being gathered in by the basketful by homeless refugees who, quite oblivious of danger, are nonchalantly tapping out the powder with small hammers or sharp stones. Neither the powder nor the brass casings are wasted; both are saved and sold. The messengers of death which rained down on Liuho bringing agony and desolation a few weeks ago are now being gathered up like manna by a desperate band of homeless people who sell the brass and powder for small sums.

Liuho is just a pile of stones. A few walls and houses, scarred by shell and rifle fire are still standing, it is true, but they are lost sight of in the overwhelming picture of desolation. The picture is all the more startling because it leaps at one suddenly, after a twenty-six mile motor ride through the calm peace of an autumnal countryside where farmers are garnering the last crops. The country is under the mellow spell of Indian summer. Cotton fields have been picked bare, the rice stalks are standing in straight, brown rows and the prevailing russet and green of the foliage is splashed by an occasional brush of vivid scarlet.

Not until we reached the stone bridge at Lootien were any soldiers encountered. Here, however, was a sizeable encampment of former Chekiang men who were under General Yang Hua-chao, but are now under the Kiangsu command. A flotilla of boats anchored along the shore and under the bridge houses several groups of these men; tents and matsheds

ARMED ROBBERS SHOOT C.P.C. IN PISTOL BATTLE

Police Constables Foil Gang In Attempted Raid On Pawnshop

Chinese Police Constable 1286 was shot in the breast during the early morning hours yesterday by one of a gang of armed robbers whom he and C. P. C. 604 had trapped in an attempt to rob a pawnshop at No. 741 Penang Road.

The two police constables were on duty on Penang Road shortly after 2 o'clock in the morning when they saw a man loitering in front of the pawnshop. C. P. C. 604 followed the man down an alleyway which led to the rear of the shop, C. P. C. 1286 remaining on the roadway in the meantime.

When he arrived at the rear of the shop, C. P. C. 604 discovered seven or eight men about the door, apparently attempting to effect an entrance. He blew his whistle in order to summon the aid of the other constable. Simultaneously, one of the robbers shouted to his comrades and all started to run in an effort to escape.

C. P. C. 1286 met and grappled with one of the men as he ran out of the alleway. Three of the robber's comrades in the meantime started chasing C. P. C. 604 along Penang Road, firing as they went. All of their shots went wild.

Returning to the pawnshop, they found their companion still held by C. P. C. 1286, and they immediately opened fire on the

Admits Responsibility For Disturbances In Mandate

TSAOz ..Ch

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Nov. 2.—President Tsao Kun this afternoon at 6 o'clock officially announced his resignation and at the same time forwarded the Presidential seals to the Kuowuyuan.

President Tsao, immediately after his decision to resign yesterday, intended to hand over the seals to the Kuowuyuan but owing to the fact that a certain Mr. Liu, a secretary to the Presidency, had disappeared, taking with him the key of a safe in which the Presidential seals had been kept, the delivery of the seals in question was delayed until this afternoon as it took the authorities concerned some time before they succeeded in

TAKES RESPONSIBILITY

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Nov. 3.—The gist of the mandate, issued by President Tsao Kun last evening concerning his resignation, is that the present disturbances being practically due to his unworthiness, he has decided to tender his resignation, taking the entire responsibility upon himself.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Nov. 3.—General Feng Yu-hsiang's representatives yesterday demanded President Tsao Kun to hand over all seals which will probably be done today.

President Tsao Kun yesterday prepared his resignation intending to send it to Parliament today. He also completed a circular telegram announcing his resignation. After resigning he will leave the presidential mansion, and take up his abode in the ex-President Li Yuan-hung's former private residence.

FENGTIEN VOTES FOR RECOGNITION OF PEKING RULE

Strict Autonomy In Financial Matters Is Retained, However

(Eastern News Agency)

Mukden, Nov. 1.—The Fengtien faction held an important meeting yesterday at which it was decided, as already announced, to cancel the independence of the Three Eastern Provinces and to place Manchuria under the control of the Peking Government provided Marshal Tuan Chi-jui comes out of his retirement and assumes the post as President.

It was further decided that considering it unadvisable positively to participate in the political affairs in Peking at the present time, the Three Eastern Provinces should refrain from interfering in Peking politics, only securing an influential voice and observing the policy of maintaining peace and order and of promoting welfare among the inhabitants within their domain, and that as for the financial affairs of Manchuria, they should be strictly separated from those of the Central Government even after the cancellation of the independence of Manchuria.

The Peitsang front has been completely broken up.

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Nov. 3.—Marshal Wu Pei-fu left the East Station of Tientsin for Tangku at 3 o'clock this morning. The Chihli troops, which were defeated in the Yangtsun sector, are fast falling back towards Tientsin.

CHI TO CALL CONFERENCE AT CHENGJU

Gentry And Magistrates Invited To Discuss Reconstruction

HUPEH DEMANDS

Yung-ming's Braves Paid $257,000

A conference for the reconstruction of the war devastated districts in Kiangsu has been called by Marshal Chi Hsieh-yuan and will take place today at his Chengju headquarters. Heads of the Chinese Chambers of Commerce and leading members of the gentry here and other Kiangsu cities have been invited to attend. Invitations to the local merchants were issued yesterday by Magistrate Li Shou-tse of the Shanghai City.

Details regarding how the stragglers, refugees and homeless in the stricken towns are to be taken care of during the winter months will occupy the attention of the gathering. In an order issued to the magistrates of Shanghai, Paoshan, Kiating, Tachang and Quinsan, Marshal Chi expressed his feeling of sympathy for the areas affected by the internecine struggle. He trusts that by this deliberation adequate provisions will be made for the stricken.

Despite promises, neither the Hupeh brigade under Chang Yung-ming nor the tenth division of Chekiang forces departed from Shanghai up to a late hour yesterday. The attitude of Chang is causing anxiety among the local political interests, especially in view of the fact he has been amply paid for his services.

Chang has made repeatedly promises either to return to Hupeh or to participate in the Chihli-Mukden war, but save the sending away of a regiment of Hupeh troops not directly under his command, he has refrained from moving away. Indications are that he prefers to stay. All kinds of excuses have been offered for the delay. At first, it was merely a question of salaries for his men. After this was provided for, he asked for winter clothes. When this was taken care of, he demanded money and clothing for the Chekiang men whom he had re-enlisted. Accommodations for these worthies even were made by the Kiangsu authorities in order to avoid any hard feeling. Moreover, transportation expenses have been provided for, and the forces are still here.

It was learned from a reliable source yesterday that the Kiangsu military authorities up to yesterday have paid him the sum of $227,000 and the local merchants, $30,000, to fiance his return to Hupeh. Yet Chang is procras-

RETREAT ON TIENTSIN AS FINAL THRUST IS DELIVERED

Feng's Vanguards On Outskirts Of City

WILD CONFUSION

Foreign Concessions Are Stampeded By Refugees

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tientsin, Nov. 3.—Fighting which took place from the afternoon of November 1 up to yesterday in the sector to the north of Tientsin resulted in the crashing defeat of Marshal Wu Pei-fu's troops. A large number of officers and men of the Chihli troops have slipped into the Chinese town here. Vanguards of the troops under the command of General Feng Yu-hsiang and Hu Ching-i already arrived at a point on the outskirts of Tientsin.

The Chinese city is now presenting such a confusion as has never been seen before. Thousands of refugees are making a stampede into the foreign Settlements.

Commanders of all foreign garrisons here held an emergency meeting at which it was decided conjointly to guard all the Settlements.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Oct. 28.—General Feng had 8,000 men at Fengtai (not Kaifeng) last night. This is his main front, but this morning a number of his troops were sent in the direction of Chingho and Shaho to meet Chahar troops who defeated General Feng's detachment at Nankao Pass yesterday and entered the Chihli plains. These Chahar troops were sent to the front but found themselves at a loose end when General Feng deserted his post, and have now been sent to aid Marshal Wu. They consist of one mixed brigade, which is said to be holding the pass, and several yings of cavalry, which have come beyond that point.

No developments are reported from Langfang. Some fighting occurred yesterday beyond Liuliho where Honan troops were driven back by General Feng's men.

According to statements made by General Feng's people General Yen Hsi-shan has torn up the rails at Chengtingfu. Reports from Mukden say that Marshal Chang announces that General Li Ching-lin has been ordered to proceed in the direction of Peking to assist General Feng Yu-hsiang. These two reports have not been confirmed.

In Peking public opinion is strongly against the "peace move" which is becoming revealed as a Mukden plot.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Oct. 29.—The collapse at Shanhaikuan will completely alter the position in Peking, where General Feng's friends were busily engaged in attempting to bring about a compromise. The victory of General Feng's allies in the North will probably induce him to break off these negotiations.

It is reported on good authority that General Feng has surmounted another pressing difficulty by securing $3,000,000 from Mukden transmitted by Russian friends.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tientsin, Nov. 2.—General Hu Ching-yi's Shensi troops have made an attack on the Yangtsun front.

Peace negotiations are at present proceeding between General Feng Yu-hsiang and Marshal Wu Pei-fu. Meanwhile there is an armistice and no fighting between their forces.

The transport "Henli" arrived from Chingangtao at the British Bund with headquarters details of the Fifteenth Division and a quantity of ammunition and war material. They were peacefully disarmed and handed over to the Chinese police.

The transport "Mowjee" arrived at the German Bund this morning with her decks crowded with troops. A landing was refused them and the ship was ordered to return down the river.

As there are numerous foreign war ships in the river there is considerable criticism of the naval authorities for allowing transports to enter Tientsin harbor.

Alarming reports were being circulated last night of looting in the Chinese City and of the distribution of anti-foreign pamphlets, but they turned out to be untrue. Upon investigation it was discovered that 2,000 mutinous troops of the Shensi Division had attempted to break through from the Central Station and enter the city. The police were immediately warned and they despatched a strong body armed with machine guns to the station. Thereupon the troops returned to the train and were sent down the Tientsin-Pukow line towards Machang.

Other Shensi troops have been disarmed by the foreign guard at Tientsin East Station.

The entire staff of the twenty-third Division boarded the "Kwangping" at Chinwangtao in civilian attire. They were taken off at Tientsin by the British police. General Wang Wei-cheng at first declared that he was a banker and that he went to Chinwangtao to collect a debt, but he ultimately admitted his identity. Apparently he fled from the front to Lanchow and thence proceeded to Chinwangtao because he was unable to get through from Lanchow to Tientsin.

FLEE TO TIENTSIN

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Nov. 2.—The Chihli troops, which were routed in the Yangtsun sector and took refuge in the Chinese town here today, total upward of 1,000.

General Li Yung-tien, Pacification Commissioner of Tientsin and concurrently newly appointed Commander of Martial Law here, fled this morning, and in consequence, peace and order in the Chinese town is being maintained by the Chinese Police Bureau.

All the military offices in the Chinese town, which belong to Marshal Wu's faction, have taken off the sign-boards at the doors of their offices.

The trains at the station, where Marshal Wu has newly established his general headquarters, are all fully loaded with Chihli troops.

GEN. PAN TAKEN PRISONER

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Nov. 2.—The combined troops under the command of Generals Feng Yu-hsiang and Sun Yo at daybreak today launched an enveloping attack upon Marshal Wu Pei-fu's forces in the sector of Yangtsun and completely occupied that stronghold by noon together with 3,000 rifles and large quantities of other munitions.

In the above battle, Brigadier-General Pan Hou-chun, Commander of the 1st Mixed Brigade of Shantung troops, was taken prisoner. During the Kiangsu-Chekiang war, Brigadier-General Pan, at the head of some one regiment of Shantung troops, participated in the battle in the Quinsan sector for General Chi Hsieh-yuan, but returned to Tientsin some time ago to render assistance to Marshal Wu Pei-fu.

It is understood that the leaders of the Shantung troops, with the exception of Brigadier-General Pan, are all inclined to support General Feng Yu-hsiang consequent upon the change in the situation turning out to be unfavorable to Marshal Wu Pei-fu.

HUPEH POWERLESS

(Eastern News Agency)

Hankow, Nov. 2.—The traffic on the Kin-Han line having been interrupted at Shihchiachuang which was captured by the Shansi troops under the command of General Yen Hsi-shan, those Hupeh troops which are now on their way to the North with the object of rendering assistance to Marshal Wu Pei-fu, are unable to proceed any further.

Besides, these Hupeh troops upon receiving the news of the defeat of the Chihli forces on all sides are reported to be unwilling to proceed to Tientsin.

General Chao Heng-ti, Civil Governor and concurrently Commander-in-Chief of the Hunan troops, who for some time past is alleged to have been in communication with Marshal Tuan Chi-jui's faction, has wired to the Marshal, urging him to come out of his retirement and immediately to take up the post as President and concurrently Commander-in-Chief of the "National Army."

SHANTUNG TO MOBILIZE

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Nov. 1.—According to a report that has been made to Marshal Tuan Chi-jui by a representative of General Cheng Shih-chi, Tuli of Shantung, General Cheng has come to the conclusion to mobilize the Shantung troops against Marshal Wu Pei-fu.

TAKE PAOTINGFU

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Nov. 1.—The troops under the command of General Sun Yo yesterday captured Paotingfu, President Tsao's base of operations. Part of the 2nd Shensi Division and of the 26th Division belonging to Marshal Wu today created disturbances in the Chinese town of Tientsin.

BEATEN AT YANGTSUN

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Nov. 2.—Yesterday afternoon, General Feng Yu-hsiang's troops encountered Marshal Wu's forces in the Yangtsun sector with the result that the latter were routed in the direction of Peitsang. Marshal Wu is now endeavoring to put in order those Chihli troops which have arrived at Tangku from Chinwangtao by sea.

NO REFUGE IN SHANTUNG

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Nov. 1.—General Cheng Shih-chi, Tuli of Shangtung, on the night of October 31 officially declared his strict neutrality as well as his policy of defending his borders of his province and of safeguarding the provincials.

General Chen has despatched three brigades to Tehchow with a view to preventing defeated Chihli troops from entering Shantung. The above Shantung troops have destroyed a bridge on the Tientsin-Pukow line.

An alarm turned into the police station by C. P. C. 1286 resulted in a thorough search of the neighborhood but no trace of the bandits was found. At the Shantung Road Hospital, to which the injured police constable was taken, it was ascertained that the robber's bullet had luckily inflicted merely a flesh wound and that his condition was not serious.

SOCIALISTS IN FRANCE NOT TO FIGHT HERRIOT

Attitude Toward Cabinet Is Discussed At Meeting Of National Council

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Nov. 2.—The National Council of the Socialist Party has discussed the attitude of Socialists towards the Cabinet.

The parliamentary leader, M. Blum, stated that Socialists would support M. Herriot's Government so long as it did everything possible to carry out the program of the Bloc.

The Left parties recommended voting for the budget if the Cabinet showed that it would introduce energetic reforms, even if the budget was insufficiently advanced from the Socialists' point of view.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Nov. 3.—The National Council of the Socialist Party while maintaining the autonomy of the party unanimously passed a motion today for supporting the policy of the Government. It also passed by a big majority a motion to vote favorably for the budget.

mit the possibility of defeat, but there is an abundance of evidence that something like a landslide is to be expected.

The Republican papers estimate that President Coolidge will secure 300 electoral votes out of the 531 in the Electoral College, while the Democratic papers publish expert estimates giving him as high as 278 votes. The latter would mean that if a single important Northern State went Democratic it would bring President Coolidge's vote below the required 266 and throw the choice of President into the Lower House, but everyone seems confident that this will not happen because it is believed that Senator LaFollette's candidacy will take greater toll of the Democrats than of the Republicans.

Disease Now Grips War Devastated Districts, Freed Of Fighting Men

Malaria, Typhoid, Dysentery Newest Enemies Of Civilian Population Of Country Surrounding Shanghai Settlement

Malaria, typhoid and dysentery, gripping seven out of every 10 persons are the latest enemies of the warring district, just out of Shanghai, which was swept through and devastated by thousands of Chinese soldiers for several weeks.

That is indicated from the report made yesterday by Dr. Frank A. Wilmot, University Hospital, Nanking, China, who has been in the stricken districts for the last two weeks, directing the cleaning up process.

The refugees are returning slowly to their homes in the larger cities, Dr. Wilmot reports. Soldiers are still frightening and keeping residents away from the less populated areas, however.

Civilian officials, in many cases, have not returned to their cities to take up their duties of enforcing order. Consequently, many of the persons who have returned to the cities have become infected with some of the diseases through bad water and polluted food.

THOROUGH WORK

Practically every spot was cleaned under the direction of Dr. Wilmot and Dr. J. Y. T. Woo, a Nanking physician.

The two men went through every city and village between Sungkiang and Liuho, ordering clean-ups and planning restoration of devastated areas.

They found streams and canals dirty with dead animals and dead human bodies. They found wells polluted by the soldiers. Buildings, former homes of the civilian population, were in a horrible condition, the soldiers having seemingly made strongest efforts to leave their "war-time" quarters in as miserable a shape as possible.

But Chinese residents did cooperate to the highest degree in aiding in the clean-up work, Dr. Wilmot reported. The Chinese showed confidence in the work of the foreigners by tackling other homes than their own, throwing out refuse and burning trash in the homes of persons who have not as yet returned.

BUSINESS SUFFERING

Business is suffering greatly because of lack of cargo carriers, Dr. Wilmot said. Practically every sampan on the scores of canals through the district was taken over by the soldiers and only a few of them have been returned. Owners have no idea where their vessels are but it is believed that the soldiers loaded them with loot and have gone up the Yangtsze river.

Even larger boats, used in carrying salt, were taken over by the soldiers with the crews remaining aboard. Owners have not been successful in locating the larger vessels, either.

Dr. Wilmot estimated yesterday that fully 90 percent of the boats on the canals were stolen.

The few that were left were overturned.

VILLAGES DEVASTATED

Dr. Wilmot found villages, looking as if they had been in the wake of a cyclone. Those buildings that were not burned to the ground were torn down—but always after they had been thoroughly looted.

An indirect reason for the devastating of homes was the fact that the wealthy citizens took all their possessions with them when they fled before the soldiers. This angered the soldiers who burned or tore down houses.

Poorer homes, in many cases, were not molested.

The persons who remained in their homes were better off as far as retaining possession of homes and property were concerned than those who fled, Dr. Wilmot found.

Many women were ravaged by the soldiers, Dr. Wilmot was told.

MILLIONS OF FLIES

The commission appointed by the civil governor Han at Nanking, who was responsible for raising much of the money which was used in the clean-up, found villages thick with flies. Dr. Wilmot was forced to keep his hand waving in front of his face to get through the clouds of winged pests in many towns.

Soldiers are getting out of the districts fairly rapidly.

Dr. Wilmot, however, had an interesting experience last week when, while walking towards Shanghai with $1,000, contributed for the restoration work, he was accosted by several soldiers who intimated they might be able to find a use for any money he had on his person. Dr. Wilmot maintained an innocent look and was allowed to proceed on his way to Shanghai.

ENDOWMENT INSURANCE — WHOLE LIFE INSURANCE

JOHN W. DAVIS—

Democratic Candidate for President of the United States, strongly endorses life insurance. He says:

I think enough of life insurance myself to be able to say that I carry enough of it to care for such estate as I may leave—pay all the required taxes thereon—and independent of my other resources, care for those dependent upon me, in the event that I should be taken away. That is good sense, good business, common honesty. No man charged with responsibility for the welfare of others should leave them unprotected against the contingency of his death. The life insurance I carry I regard as the most certain and valuable part of my estate, and it is dedicated to a sacred purpose.

Living in the days of yore, as I have in my character of "Beau Brummel," has brought forcibly before me, on a canvas vividly painted, the overwhelming contrast of life a hundred years ago and today.

A hundred years ago! The thought opens the door to a vision of tender romance and masculine elegance that holds untold charm for me, and because I have always longed to dream "true" and really live a century ago, I felt every happiness, hope and sorrow of "Beau Brummel" deep down in the secret places of my soul, tasting to the very utmost his flushes of triumph, his conquests and his utter defeat at the hands of Fate.

The glowing colors of the picture I see! On one hand, the soft rose and silver sheen of the "Beau Brummel" age, and on the other hand, the brilliant orange and purple of 1924.

on either side of the creek accommodate the others.

Our car was halted by an officer who addressed himself to Mr. S. R. Anderson, of the Moore Memorial Church whose mission is doing such splendid work among the Liuho refugees, and who was accompanying me on the inspection trip through the wrecked city.

The officer courteously begged pardon for stopping us and said his company of soldiers would take but a short time to pass, after which we could continue on our way. Less courteous was a soldier standing nearby who inquired curiously where we were going and what we were doing. Mr. Anderson answered him and countered by asking him the same questions. Not only did the soldier refuse to answer but he unloosed a choice string of Chinese oaths which caused great merriment among his companions. This encampment is the only one of any size between Shanghai and Liuho.

The remainder of the journey was unmarred by any other incident and for the most part was just a montonous reeling off of miles of flat country. Arrived at Liuho we were besieged by hordes of small boys who offered their services as guides for anything we might wish to pay them. A few of these boys were in Liuho during the bombardment and served as "small cooks" to the soldiery. The town, just off the road, shows the marks of war only in the nicked walls where bullets have spat out their venom against the sides. A few sharp turns and the scene reveals a greater fury of bombardment in gaping holes in roofs, walls and streets. Then, suddenly, after a five minutes' walk through the narrow silent streets, deserted of all save a few gaunt-looking persons who crouch close to the shelter of the walls, the wreckage in all its appalling horror looms up. Just across the bridge where "main street" used to be, there is now nothing but piles of stones and charred embers. It is difficult to visualise in these powdery remnants the former prosperous section of the city.

The Red Cross and American flags, flying side by side, over the three-walled room which was formerly the local church of the Methodist Episcopal South Mission, guided us to the relief station which is dispensing food and clothing to about half of the 3,000 people who have already drifted back to their former home. Pastor Chang Z. Cha, who remained at his post all through the fighting at Liuho until General Lu fled, and who, with a band of 13 men brought out the wounded to the Red Cross field hospital at Lotien, is in charge of the relief. He is, as well, the appointee of the local gentry and the police, and is maintaining order among the inhabitants who have returned.

Former Liuho residents, now homeless, are earning a few cents daily by cleaning up the city and work of breaking a path through the debris is proceeding rapidly.

At the end of a narrow lane, just off the main thoroughfare, where the city ends abruptly on the edge of fields, now furrowed by trenches, was an evidence of actual fighting in the streets. A breastwork of earth and rubbish was thrown up hurriedly and all about were slanting slashes in the limestone of walls giving support to the belief that this trench had been attacked from several sides at once. To the left of this, at a distance of about 300 yards, was the first of a quarter mile series of trenches and gun emplacements, connected with substantial stone houses where the soldiery rested by myriad little dug-out paths, like rabbit runs, scarcely wide enough for a boy to creep through but sufficiently wide, apparently, for a slender Chinese soldier.

The trenches have been partly filled in by the busy returned refugees who, pursuing industriously their business of fine-tooth combing the earth in search of bullets and shells, which latter they are selling to sightseers as souvenirs or by the wholesale for melting down, have accomplished the heavy task of repairing the ravages to the fields. There are plenty of reminders of the recent occupation in discarded soldier caps, chiefly papers, cigarette packets, empty tins. The Chekiang army, it would seem, lived high on potted beef and other Occidental delicacies which come in tins. Unfortunately, squash vines which grew along the ground near many of the trenches, are only just now in bloom.

In one series of trenches a coffin of considerable antiquity had been unearthed by the soldiers who, accidentally splitting its sides thus revealing the age-blackened bones inside, nevertheless, with characteristic Oriental disregard for remains not immediately connected with their own ancestry, used the coffin as a rampart.

In the largest dug-out here, which served as an emplacement for several big guns, were Chekiang soldiers shelling Kiangsu men not fifty yards distant, for several days. Pastor Chang told us. The strong, two-foot thick walls of the temple are still standing but they may fall at any time. The one nearest the Chekiang trenches was pierced by three big shells which entered the wall at exactly the same angle, each about two feet apart, so that the appearance now is of a wall with three circular windows. Inside this small temple are dozens of empty machine-gun containers.

To the northeast of this big trench is the hill called Hsien Yen San, which strangely may be loosely translated as "the hill which gives protection," which figured so prominently in the fighting. The Chekiang men were at its base and on the other side, and to the left and right, not more than fifteen feet apart, according to Liuho people, were the Kiangsu men. They popped away merrily at each other, exchanged comments on the weather and boasted of the superior chow they were receiving. The hill changed hands three times during the fighting.

Immediately in front of this rather bare, unnatural-looking mound which is less a hill than a hillock, are tragic ruins with a tragic story. A blackened ruin is all that remains of the Liuho shelter for babies where thirty children perished. The women helpers in the shelter fled at the first sounds of guns. The children were not theirs and their maternal instinct did not reach out to these little strange ones whom they had been hired to care for. The man in active charge of the shelter, strangely enough, stayed until he was killed by soldiers—which soldiers, it will never be known. The children, most of them mere babies, either died of neglect or perished of the flames which devoured their home. The ruins lay over their tiny bodies which have never been removed. Next door is a girls' school, also a heap of charred stone. In the gardens cosmos, marigold, chrysanthemums and other fall flowers are blooming, a riot of color amid the drab, dead surroundings. Here, with the blasted trees, the upturned brown earth, the picture is more reminiscent of France, after the holocaust, than elsewhere in the Chinese city.

In all this once prosperous city of Liuho, which, before the war housed 20,000 people, there are just three or four shops open for business. The delay of the people in returning is due, undoubtedly, to the fear of the soldiery who still linger in the neighborhood for, according to the inhabitants, the place has been thoroughly looted three times. It is small wonder that the people comb the earth for bullets for there is little else left. Nanking is supplying the half of the 3,000-odd returned refugees with food, the Methodist Episcopal Church South is taking care of the other half. Clothes and bed covering are urgently needed and contributions of these are earnestly requested. The Moore Memorial Church, 4 Thibet road, is the receiving depot for all gifts of this sort, not only for Liuho sufferers but for the war-stricken of other towns as well.

The road to Liuho—and back—is not yet one to be traversed with ease by nervous persons. On the return journey to Shanghai our car was stopped four times between Lootien and Dazang, the latter being about fifteen miles from Shanghai. In each instance two soldiers, with business-looking rifles, stepped directly in the path of the car. Their questions were always the same "where are you going?" "what are you doing?" "where have you come from?" "what did you do there?" and "what have you got in the motor car?" Mr. Anderson, who speaks Chinese fluently, always courteously answered their questions, first in English, to impress them with our respectability and remind them that we were foreigners, and then in Chinese so there would be no misunderstanding. There was a little hesitation about letting us go in two instances, however, but the soldiers apparently thought better of holding us and after a consultation gruffly released us.

Sightseers are not so plentiful yet and souvenirs are not to be had, except for a price. The only thing you can take in Liuho is pictures.

Moscow, Nov. 2.—The Commissariat of Foreign Affairs have declined the League of Nations' invitation to the Soviet to participate in the conference at Geneva in November for the limitation of the drug traffic, on the ground that the Powers are thinking of promoting their own economic interests rather than organising a practical campaign against the abuse of narcotics.

Chi To Call Meeting At Chengju Today

tinating. His soldiers were seen loitering in the streets and public houses of Shanghai City yesterday.

Many cases of disorderly conduct among the Hupeh troops were reported during the week-end. The Sin Wan Pao reports a startling incident which took place at Mei Chia Lung in the city on Saturday afternnon. At a wedding of a prominent family, according to the report, while two bridesmaids were being motored to the scene of wedding, one of these braves got on the running board and molested the girls. As a result, said the report, one of the girls got sick. The head of the family has reported the matter to the authorities.

Although the tenth division of Chekiang forces, formerly under Lu Yung-hsiang, has become less recalcitrant following the offer made by General Pei Pao-shan to guarantee their personal welfare, they remained in Kiangwan yesterday without any apparent reason. They had previously agreed to be sent to Hsuchowfu and Haichow to be under the personal care of Pei, who has paid them the sum of $600,000 for their provisions.

Only about 7,000 are now left by the division, it was learned yesterday. More than 3,000 have been recruited by the Mukden army to fight in the North and shipped away by steamers of a certain nation to Manchuria. The remaining soldiery has expressed their unwillingness to fight for Chang Tso-lin, but refused to be disbanded. Consequently, the offer was made for them to do garrison duty in Hsuchowfu and Haichow where they will draw their usual pay and serve in the national army as before.

However, representatives of the Kiangsu authorities believe that the crisis in Kiangwan is over and the remnants of the Chekiang army will be sent away without trouble within a few days. The problem of the Hupeh men, they admitted, was less easy to solve although they declare that they have done all they could on their part to show them the courtesies they deserved.

MISTAKES MOTHERS MAKE
And How They Can Be Set Right With Baby's Own Tablets.

Many mothers give their children solid food at too early an age and say proudly that their babies "eat everything that grown up people do", when such a course is almost certain to bring on indigestion and to lay the foundation of much ill-health.

Others administer harsh nauseating purgatives, and thus make the little ones fear medicine, at the same time irritating and injuring their delicate stomachs and bowels.

Absolutely no meat should be given a child until it has reached the age of 18 months, and then only if approved of by the doctor. For medicine, all strong disagreeable draughts and oils should be abandoned and Baby's Own Tablets substituted instead.

Baby's Own Tablets are especially made for children's use and can be given with absolute safety to even the youngest infant. They reduce fever, cure colic and indigestion, dispel constipation, check diarrhoea, relieve croup and colds, allay teething troubles, and promptly bring health giving restful sleep in a natural way.

Chemists sell Baby's Own Tablets, or sent post free, 60 cents per vial, by Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 60 Kiangse Road, Shanghai.

Who Said Begg?

YOREFUL versus AWFUL!
By JOHN BARRYMORE

1824 "The Beau Brummel" Age	1924 The Bu3iness Man's Age
Elegant beaux and gracious maids	Short-haired flappers
Lydian strains and minuets	Crashing jazz and shimmy-craze
Golden fragrant liqueurs	Prohibition and wood alcohol
"To the Ladies Fair!"	"To the Almighty Dollar!"
Feather quills and billets-doux	Dictaphones and "wrong number"
Courtliness and deference	"Watch your step!"
Sedan chairs and post chaises	Subways and airplanes
Brocades, silks and satins	Soup and fish, serges and tweeds
Ruffles, laces and furbelows	Stiff collars and boils
Perfume, curls and power.	Witch hazel and hair-restorers.

Living in the days of yore, as I have in my character of "Beau Brummel," has brought forcibly before me, on a canvas vividly painted, the overwhelming contrast of life a hundred years ago and today.

A hundred years ago! The thought opens the door to a vision of tender romance and masculine elegance that holds untold charm for me, and because I have always longed to dream "true" and really live a century ago, I felt every happiness, hope and sorrow of "Beau Brummel" deep down in the secret places of my soul, tasting to the very utmost his flushes of triumph, his conquests and his utter defeat at the hands of Fate.

The glowing colors of the pictures I see! On one hand, the soft rose and silver sheen of the "Beau Brummel" age, and on the other hand, the brilliant orange and purple of 1924.

A Chinese subscriber writes to the Straits Echo:—"Most of the girls in China have discarded the ancient custom of always remaining at home by sallying out to America to further their studies. Penang girls however find it a virtue to adhere to this age-old custom with greater strictness and severity. One seldom sees a Chinese girl going out to make her own purchases, and still rarer is the sight of a fair one having a game of tennis or taking a walk. No, they must be content to sit indoors or peep behind latticed windows. And in this age of suffragettes, we are really surprised that our Penang sisters should be so far behind the times. Though a few have adopted the Shanghai dress, yet the kebaya and sarong are the usual habiliments of the fair sex. Custom in Penang doubtless prescribes this form of dress, but it is surely a heavy tax on their freedom."

MIDNIGHT FIRE BREAKS OUT ON THE WHANGPOO

Cotton Barges In Flames; Three Companies Called Out

At 11:36 last night a fire was reported from Pootung, from McKenzie's wharf, where several barges loaded with cotton were in flames. The cotton was thrown on to the river, and floated on the surface, a flaming menace to the many small boats along the stream, while the burning barges themselves were a still more serious danger.

The Central Fire Station turned out, also Hongkew and Yangtsepoo, and took to fighting the fire from floats, using the Fire Department's own float, the Customs float, and some other rafts along the river. After two hours hard work, most of the fires were under control, and by 2 a.m. they were quite extinguished and the river boats safe again, none of the other craft having been caught by the flames.

CONSERVATIVES PUZZLING OVER APPOINTMENTS

Fifty-two Posts To Fill And No Less Than 77 Out As Applicants

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 3.—Municipal elections were held in three hundred boroughs in England and Wales on Saturday. The chief feature was the determined Labor attack, the number of Labor candidates exceeding that of either the Conservatives or the Liberals.

The results so far show a large turnover of seats with the balance somewhat in favor of Labor. The Conservatives improved their position slightly, but the Liberals lost heavily.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 3.—With the Laborites relegated to the limbo of a helpless minority, the newspapers lengthily discuss the personnel and possibilities of the new Government, in regard to which Mr. Stanley Baldwin has the embarrassing task of arranging 52 governmental appointments, for which there are at the least 77 applicants.

The Morning Post welcomes an era of national policy and the development of Empire trade.

The Times remarks that the result of the election has silenced the talk of British decadence which was very common recently on the Continent, and says that a new and great opportunity has been given to British statesmanship. The country is now in a position to look calmly ahead, while it has recovered two of the most important assets of foreign policy, namely:—time and confidence. Alluding to foreign problems as in no wise simple, the same newspaper refers to the growing unrest in the Near East and the Middle East, and emphasises the need of developing an intelligent and clearly British policy in regard to the remarkable developments in China.

Tokio, Nov. 3.—Major Zanni has abandoned his round-the-world flight.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, Nov. 3.—Major Zanni has been informed that the ports of Petropavlovsk and Paramushiru are icebound, and the possibility of getting ships precluded. He is hopeful he may be able to continue flight in other directions, and is awaiting a decision from home.

SAYS NEWSPAPERS WILL BE BETTER IN THE FUTURE

Dr. Cunliffe Predicts They Will Be Fewer, But The Quality Will Improve

Fewer and better newspapers are predicted by Dr. J. W. Cunliffe, Director of the School of Journalism of Columbia University, whose annual report was made public recently, by President Nicholas Murray Butler.

"The pride of the journalist in his profession is not yet dead—very far from it—and this is a most valuable resource which ought to be encouraged and developed for the public advantage," says Dr. Cunliffe.

"Fewer newspapers we are almost certain to have and, with a larger income at their disposal, the survivors ought to be better newspapers. But they will only be better if the men conducting them have intelligence, education, professional capacity and a keen sense of public responsibility.

"If the conception of the newspaper as a private business enterprise should become universal, and it should no longer be regarded as a public trust, I do not see how democratic government is to be carried on."

The total number of journalism students last year was 172. The first professional year class included fifty-two men and thirty-nine women as against forty-one men and twenty-four women in the previous year. Of these twenty-six men entered from Columbia College, two women from Barnard College, seven women from University Extension and two men and one women from Teachers College—thirty-eight in all from within the university. The remaining fifty-three had received their college training in various institutions scattered all over the country. Of the 172, fifty-two reported their home residence as New York City and twenty-three in other parts of New York State.

Conferring of honorary degrees by the university upon Victor F. Lawson of The Chicago Daily News, Adolph S. Ochs of The New York Times and Melville E. Stone of The Associated Press, Dr. Cunliffe says, is "regarded by the journalism staff not only as a compliment to the profession of journalism, but indirectly as a recognition of the work done by the school, with which Mr. Lawson and Mr. Stone are associated as members of the Advisory Board."

Dr. Cunliffe deals with the further development of the graduate curriculum, which he describes as somewhat lacking in variety and offering little freedom of choice to students who already have taken undergraduate work.

"The provision of graduate courses for a comparatively small number of students is always expensive," he says, "and progress in this direction must be gradual, but the need for it should not be forgotten."

Dr. Cunliffe attributes to Dr. Talcott Williams, first director of the school, the conviction that for a number of years the number of professional journalists in the United States has not increased.

"The probabilities," the report goes on, "are that it will not advance in the next few years, the increase in the population being about balanced by the decrease in the number of newspapers. We shall have fewer newspapers with wider circulation, and the salaries of the editorial and reporting staffs will be a comparatively small amount in the total expenditure.

"As it will be of increasing importance that the editorial and reporting work should be well done, it may reasonably be hoped that there will be a constant demand for capable and well-trained journalists. The policy of the school, in endeavoring to turn out a moderate number of really competent men and women rather than a large number of merely mediocre ones, is therefore justified by the conditions of the profession and it is at the same time in accordance with the high ideals Joseph Pulitzer had in view when he planned the foundation of the school.

THAT Early-Morning COUGH CALLS FOR PEPS.

THOSE lung-tearing bouts of "early-morning" cough, so common in our climate, cannot be cured unless the irritation provoking the cough is removed. The delicate lining of the breathing tubes, weakened and inflamed by incessant coughing, must also be strengthened and healed. Herein lies the peculiar virtue of the Peps breatheable treatment.

The potent balsamic fumes given off by Peps tablets as they dissolve in the mouth, are carried with the breath straight into throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. Thus Peps soothe and thoroughly disinfect the throat, clear the clogged-up air-tubes and extend a healing, purifying and strengthening influence to vital inner recesses that are quite beyond the reach of druggy liquid cough-mixtures.

GET A BOTTLE TO-DAY!

Peps are always the pleasantest, safest and most effective remedy for coughs, colds and chills, sore throat, laryngitis, influenza, malarial colds, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, and other prevalent weaknesses of throat, chest and lungs.

La Follette Eulogises Loyal Germans In U.S.

New York, Sept. 22.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, speaking yesterday before 20,000 members of the Steuben Society in the Yankee Stadium, extolled the German immigrants and their descendants for their loyalty, patriotism, courage and accomplishments.

Senator La Follette did not speak as a candidate for the Presidency and his speech was non-political. He said so emphatically at the outset, although he had just been presented as "the future President of the United States." Instead, he eulogised Baron Friedrich Wilhelm von Steuben of Revolutionary fame, from whom the society takes its name, paid tribute to Carl Schurz and stressed the contribution of German-Americans in the making of America.

PRAISES CARL SCHURZ

The reference to Schurz and his administration of the Department of the Interior while a member of the Cabinet of President Hayes gave the Wisconsin Senator an opportunity to use comparisons.

"When, as Secretary of the Interior, Schurz found the Indian Bureau permeated with corruption and graft he did not hesitate to clean out the rascals," Senator La Follette said.

The emphasis on the word "he" was plain enough for every one present to apprehend the implied meaning, and when the cheering had subsided Senator La Follette said he was not going to talk politics until some other time.

There was not much politics in his talk, although there had been plenty before he got there. An audience of 75,000, which Senator La Follette had been led to expect would be present, materialised as only 20,000, leaving whole sections of the big stands empty.

ALL PAY ADMISSION

Nevertheless, those who did come paid from 50 cents to $2 admission, most of which is to go into the La Follette-Wheeler campaign fund, it is said. In addition, Mrs. Marie B. MacDonald, prominent Socialist worker, made an appeal for campaign contributions, and 100 women took up the collection.

Although the occasion had been announced as commemorating the birth of Baron von Steuben, the program centered around Senator La Follette's second speech here within four days. There had been some gymnastic exhibitions by teams of the Turn Verein and a choral program by several singing societies.

But the real interest of the audience came in the arrival of the Senator shortly before 5 o'clock. The crowd cheered and the bands played as he was escorted to the speakers' stand by John Grossegebauer, national chairman of the Steuben Society; George Sylvester Viereck and others.

Just as the first lull came there was a parade of the German societies present and the noise broke out anew, only to be haled a few minutes later at the Senator's request. He plunged at once into his speech and established a cordial feeling with his audience by declaring that the "Steuben Society is an American society of unimpeachable attachments to the fundamental principles of the Constitution."

"You are a loyal, patriotic organisations, he continued, "which would preserve and foster home sentiment and interest in the history, traditions and achievements of your forebears, especially as they stimulate high ideals for this generation and for the coming generations of American citizens."

There was more cheering when he declared that "throughout the terrible strain of the World War citizens of German blood loyally supported the government of the United States."

REFERS TO WAR HYSTERIA

"Under the stress of war hysteria," continued the Senator, "they suffered heartbreaking humiliation. They were martyrs of wrongful suspicion, espionage, prosecution and mob violence. The German element of the population passed through the reign of terror with extraordinary credit and fortitude. Reprisals were not resorted to by citizens of German blood to settle their grievances."

He spoke slowly and sometimes haltingly, still a bit ill at ease, due to the presence of the radio microphones which carried his words to the amplifiers perched overhead.

At other points in his speech he referred to Carl Schurz as a progressive and then to the support which the German-Americans of Wisconsin have given "our progressive movement." Smilingly he wagged an admonitory finger at the newspaper men present and cautioned "Now don't you go and make anything out of that.

Rumbling of elevated and subway trains nearby annoyed him somewhat and, while waiting for one of them to pass he told the crowd, "I've always had trouble with the railroads."

The devotion of the German elements in America's population was traced by Senator La Follette from Revolutionary times to the present. He quoted Washington's appreciation of them, "their excellent character for diligence, sobriety and virtue," adding "his tribute is as true today as when it was written."

When coming down to Civil War days, Senator La Follette said: "As Steuben fitted into the Revolutionary period, so Schurz fitted into the period of the Civil War. He was one of the millions of German immigrants who honored our American life following the revolutions that swept Europe in the period of 1848 and the years quickly following. If his statesmanship and ideals had not appealed to the German element of the population Schurz could not have attained the high place he held, nor could he have wielded such great national influence.

BLOW TO SPOILS SYSTEM

"Schurz was the first German-born member of the Cabinet and also first German-born member of the United States Senate. Schurz for the first time in our political history—for the first time I say—when Secretary of the Interior under President Hayes applied the civil service principle to the conduct of a government department. When appointed to the Cabinet he declared his policy that there were to be no removals except for cause, and that all promotions would be made on merit. Thus he struck the first blow at the evils of the old spoils and office-seeking system.

"When, as Secretary of the Interior, Schurz found the Indian Bureau permeated with corruption and graft, the nation's wards being despoiled of their rightful heritage he did not hesitate to clear out the rascals, to remove and punish the guilty, without fear or favor. That was the kind of a Secretary of Interior Carl Schurz was.

"Schurz was the first Cabinet official to appeal for legislation which would conserve our forests and the great national resources of our timber lands for the public.

"Now, I am not going to talk politics. But, I just call attention to this important fact in Carl Schurz's history.

"Carl Schurz was a reformer. He was an independent in politics. He was a progressive.

"The motives and spirit of Carl Schurz are typical of the great body of our citizenship, the German-Americans, whom he so ably represented. I venture to say that you will not misunderstand me if I testify on this occasion to the support accorded by Wisconsin citizens of German blood to our progressive movement. Both in the making and in the faithful administration of the laws they have been an indispensable part of our achievement and success. Our German element may be conservative in temperament, but they have a deep civic conscientiousness and a high sense of duty, that once convinced of the soundness of an issue, once enlisted in a cause, they adhere to it with patience and zeal and a high courage until it has been settled right.

"The real test of American citizenship is not the family tree. Nor does it lie in being able to trace ancestry back to Colonial origin. The real test is the citizen's enthusiasm and determination to share in the everyday work of making the government of the United States serve its original purpose.

"When our forefathers laid the foundations of this Republic they proclaimed their purpose, giving form and expression to an ideal in government for which mankind had been groping in all the ages past. Never were these words more precious to us than now:

"Mere passive good citizenship is not enough. Men and women must be aggressive for what is right if government is to be saved from those who are aggressive for what is wrong. The Steuben Society is enlisted in this great work."

The same thanning out of the crowd which marked Senator La Follette's Madison Square Garden speech on Thursday night was evident again yesterday as he approached the end of his address. By two and threes and then by twenties and thirties the crowd left while the Senator was speaking, and by the time he had finished it was said that his original audience of about 20,000 had been greatly reduced.

Senator La Follette will not return to Washington until this afternoon, devoting the intervening time to additional conferences with his lieutenants here.

The Prince of Wales, addressing 50,000 persons at the Stadium, said that he understood that negotiations with a view to reopening the Exhibition were now proceeding.

Torrential rain fell throughout the ceremony.

Meetings In Bengal Protest Arrests Of Alleged Terrorists

(Reuter's Service)

Calcutta, Nov. 2.—A number of public meetings were held in Bengal during the week end to protest against the arrests of alleged terrorist leaders under the new ordinance. The moderates joined the swarajists in organising a monster demonstration in Calcutta on Friday evening and a hartal was observed throughout the province yesterday, but it appears to have been more successful in the country districts than in Calcutta, where conditions were normal except in the Indian quarters.

The Swaraj Party Executive will meet on Tuesday to consider the situation, which the local Indian press describes as graver owing to the advent of a "reactionary" Government in England.

Living in the days of yore, as I have in my character of "Beau Brummel," has brought forcibly before me, on a canvas vividly painted, the overwhelming contrast of life a hundred years ago and today.

A hundred years ago! The thought opens the door to a vision of tender romance and masculine elegance that holds untold charm for me, and because I have always longed to dream "true" and really live a century ago, I felt every happiness, hope and sorrow of "Beau Brummel" deep down in the secret places of my soul, tasting to the very utmost his flushes of triumph, his conquests and his utter defeat at the hands of Fate.

The glowing colors of the pictures I see! On one hand, the soft rose and silver sheen of the "Beau Brummel" age, and on the other hand, the brilliant orange and purple of 1924.

THE MOST FASCINAING OF ALL MYSTERY PHOTOPLAYS

THE GREATEST DETECTIVE STORY IN THE WORLD

Smithsonian Institute To Get U. S. Fliers' Planes

New York, Sept. 4.—Gift of one, or both, of the American round-the-world planes to the Smithsonian Institution for a permanent historical exhibit is hailed with enthusiasm by officials, although the question of housing the gift raises a real problem.

The famous NC-4 naval plane, the first to make the flight across the Atlantic, is packed away in some corner of the navy yard because there is no space for it in the New National Museum, the old Museum building, or the aircraft building, a structure of corrugated iron near the main Smithsonian building.

Of the four Douglas cruisers which started on the world flight, only two can finish it, the other two having been lost, respectively in Alaska and at sea near Iceland. The surviving two are expected in Washington Tuesday, but will finish the flight to the Pacific Coast and then will be returned here ultimately for uncounted thousands of tourists to see—if display space can be found.

COLLECTION ALREADY STARTED

The United States, without special aid from Congress, or at least without the aid which experts consider essential, already as the embryo of an important collection of airplanes and accessories. It could be made the world's greatest collection without heavy expense, officials here assert. Following is a list of the principal exhibits:

In the old Museum building there is, as a matter of primary interest, the original Langley plane, a pioneer in aviation, as well as three models, built in 1896, one being gas propelled and two by steam. All these planes actually were flown, some with disaster to the flyers.

The original Wright plane, of 1909, which convinced the world of the achievement of flying as a practical art, also is in this building. There are, besides, the first De Haviland; the JN-4 biplane, used for instruction; two French planes of 1917, a Caudron and a Voisson, now virtually "antiques" so rapidly have improvements been made; the original Lilienthal glider, tried but years ago on Long Island; the Emile Berliner heliopter, built by a Washington man, and various models to show the development of aircraft. One of these models was built to illustrate the ideas on flying held centuries ago by Leonardo da Vinci, a wing-flopping type.

In the aircraft building is the Spad, used by Brig. Gen. Mitchell at the front in France; a full-sized seaplane, the F-5-L, much like the NC-4 used on the transatlantic flight; an aeromarine scouting plane; the De Haviland used in the first flight from Mineola, Long Island, to Nome, Alaska; the T-2, which was the first plane to make a non-stop flight across the United States, flown by Lieuts. O. G. Kelly and J. A. MacReady, in 26 hours 50 minutes and 38 2-5 seconds, on May 2, 1923; a Fokker machine, captured from the Germans; another Spad used at the front by American aviators and riddled with bullets in air combats; an early Martin bomber, a Le Pere type plane, a model of a dirigible, a model of the NC-4, and various types of airplane engines.

Naturally the impending acquisition of the planes which will have been the first to encircle the globe rouses in officials immediately concerned a more decided desire for adequate housing. They have now enough exhibits to fill 40,000, square feet, or a building the size of the old museum. As it is, some of the valuable planes are suspended in air, so that other exhibits may be accommodated on the floor, and this arrangement is perilous to priceless possessions.

AID TO INVENTORS

The NC-4 last displayed on the Monument grounds, is believed to be deteriorating in storage, since no repairs to wings and other parts are being made and may, not be made for an indefinite time. The Navy Department may be able to build a hangar for it on the Smithsonian grounds out of the department's own funds, but this is problematical. A definite program in Congress is declared to be the only feasible way to meet the need.

Much more benefit comes from the aircraft displays than the gratification of tourist interest, it is stated authoritatively. Inventors and students come to study the old models which offer suggestions for developments of the greatest importance.

Lack of housing space, however, prevents the accumulation of a representative display, many gifts being available that are not made. There are no racing planes in the exhibits, for instance, as well as other types which should be on hand to round out the progress of aircraft from the beginning to the present.

U. S. MAKES MANY RECORDS

The United States is making so many world records with planes, and these planes have such historical value, that an urgent need of foresight by Congress in housing them is emphasised by Army and Navy men as well as Smithsonian officials. The corrugated iron building now containing much of the display costs about $14,000 annually for upkeep and is neither adequate nor in keeping with the Federal Government's prestige.

Nearness to these epochal events and developments perhaps makes many persons fail to value the planes at their true worth, but future generations, with the same perspective we have on Columbus' voyage, or the first steam locomotive, will condemn this age severely if a shortsighted, niggardly policy deprives them of exhibits that now may be so readily obtained, especially, say officials if the planes finishing the thrilling first air trip around the world are not saved.

Straits And Malay Export Restrictions Relaxing As Rubber Prices Rise

American Rubber Manufacturers Caught With Small Stocks On Hand and Must Buy At Higher Prices

BY GEO. W. MISSEMER

The steady increase in the price of raw rubber during the past several months, so that present prices are approximately seventy-five percent higher than they were half a year ago, is having its effect in a number of directions and gives rise to some interesting reflections. One of the inevitable results, naturally, has been that the prices of all rubber shares have risen, and trading has been active not only in Shanghai, where there are still large holdings in rubber companies, but in other parts of the world.

The newspapers of Singapore and Penang, whose subscribers are mostly in one way or another connected with the raw rubber industry, have, for a long time, been busily engaged in discussing the pros and cons of the Stevenson rubber restriction scheme, one of the features of which is that the price of one shillings three pence per pound acts as a sort of a deadline.

Thus, if for any three months the average price does not reach the figure above mentioned, a progressive reduction in the amount of raw rubber that may be exported from Ceylon and Malaya is enforced. Up until the middle of last month the situation was just touch and go as to whether during this month there should be allowed a further increase in the export or whether a restriction should be put into effect.

EXPORT RESTRICTIONS LESSENED

Now, however, that the price of rubber on the last day of last month reached the handsome figure of one shilling five and three-eights pence it means that a greater amount may be exported than formerly, namely sixty percent. It is generally understood that American buyers are being rather badly caught by the present rise as they had all along been going on the theory that the rise which started several months ago was only temporary, and, having allowed themselves to become very short of stocks, must now come into the market and buy at the higher prices.

With the rubber industry being in the position that British controlled territories are the greatest producers while Americans are the greatest users, it is only natural that the large American tire manufacturers should have been trying to find some way out of the present situation so that they would not have to come to British hands for their requirements. But, so far, the American efforts have not been very successful.

FILIPINO LABOR TOO COSTLY

Looked at casually, the Philippines ought to be the logical field for the development of the American rubber industry, but investors find themselves on two horns of a dilemma in this connection. If the independence—and the Democratic party in America is committed to this policy—investors might find their capital in a very hazardous situation.

The real crux of the situation as regards the Philippines, however, is the matter of labor. With an idealism that is quite praiseworthy, but altogether impracticable, the American government has applied the Chinese exclusion laws to the Philippine Islands. In the absence of the competition of Chinese labor, the Filipino native, who as a worker is not to be compared with the Chinese, not only has become an indifferent worker, but the wages he demands make the cost of producing rubber in the Islands prohibitive as compared with the price at which it may be purchased in Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Sumatra, or any other producing center.

It may be that the American rubber industry—that is, as regards the raw produce—will actually only flourish after the Philippines have gained their independence because one of the almost inevitable results incidental to independence — one that the Filipinos probably do not realise—is that the Chinese who are rapidly become a stronger and more assertive people would not tolerate from the Filipinos that they should be discriminated against and excluded as they have been by Uncle Sam, and would insist on being admitted, in which case, of course, the price of labor would be greatly reduced.

It might be that under such circumstances American capitalist would take the risks incidental to investing their money in a country, the leaders of which have not shown themselves very apt in financial matters. On the other hand, however, it is just as likely that they might continue to do, what they have recently started doing, namely purchasing estates in the Straits, where, after all is said and done, the conditions for producing rubber on an extensive scale and at the cheapest cost are better than they are anywhere else in the world.

INDUSTRIAL MISSION BACK FROM MEXICO

Business Men Succeeded In Establishing A Good Understanding

New York, Sept. 24.—Sixty-seven members of the American Industrial Mission to Mexico returned last night from a two weeks' study of business conditions in the southern republic. They brought optimistic reports of Mexico's future and were emphatic in praise of President Obregon. What the immediate result of the visit will be could not be predicted by any of the members who arrived at the Pennsylvania Station, but they were free to state that Mexican industries in general were deserving of American financial aid and co-operation.

W. W. Nichols, President of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, who head the mission, told of their observations in this way:

"We went to Mexico in no official international capacity. We went as American business men and our mission was just to make a display of friendship. We hoped to be able encourage those whom we met. We succeeded in making a gesture of good will and establishing a sympathetic understanding.

"The thing that impressed us most was the high character of the men guiding the destinies of Mexico. We found all that we came in contact with to be men of honor and ability.

"President Obregon is a real man. He is a man of power, integrity and foresight, and his display of hospitable welcome was really wonderful. His attitude was not that of a host, but as if he were just a member of our party. He spent one entire day with us visiting several plants, and before the day was over he succeeded in making us believe that he was a member of the mission.

"The people of Mexico, particularly the farming class, are unbelievably poor. The poverty is noticeable as soon as one goes into the country from Mexico City.

"The Mexican industries cannot be said to be prospering, but they are well founded and have hopeful prospects. What the industries need most is capital. They want us to furnish it, and they will get all they want as soon as they inspire our people with confidence, as soon as they prove the stability of their government and overcome the impression that revolutions spring up over night in Mexico."

Before the mission went on the trip they conferred with Secretary Hughes on the advisability of the visit.

It is the opinon of the members that affairs in Mexico are growing more stable and will shortly warrant the resumption of trade relations on the part of American manufacturers. It is also believed by the party that Mexico will in time get the loan it is seeking.

Record time was made on the journey to and from Mexico City, the trip each way consuming only four days and half an hour.

JAPAN EMIGRANTS LEAVE LAND TO COLONISE BRAZIL

Group Of 244 Is First Of Parties; 3,000 To Be Sent By March

The first group of the 3,000 Japanese emigrants who will go to Brazil under the plan here to send more emigrants there in the future left on the O. S. K. steamer Mexico Maru October 15. There were 244 in the group.

The Government has appropriated Y600,000 to encourage emigration there, and under the present plan, each gets Y200, which pays the steerage passage across to South America. The second group is to leave on the N. Y. K. liner Awa Maru, which leaves Kobe on October 29. There are about 300 persons in this group. The 3,000 are to go by next March.

The emigration to Brazil from Japan is handled exclusively through the International Development Company here. This company handles the Government appropriation, which was passed in the Diet last July.

ENGAGE IN FARMING

It is estimated there are at present 35,000 Japanese in Brazil. They are, in the main, engaged in agricultural pursuits. For the last few years Japan has sent some 1,000 emigrants to Brazil a year, but the International Development Company hopes to send more emigrants in the future.

"The Japanese exclusion law of America has little connection with the Government policy to encourage to Brazil," said Mr. S. Tamaki, the manager of the emigration campaign bureau or the International Development company in an interview with a representative of The Japan Advertiser. "Japan's surplus population and the unemployment situation have been the direct motives that have resulted in sending emigrants to Brazil on a much larger scale than heretofore.

"Many Japanese are willing to emigrants there. Only lack of money for passage prevents their going. The recent Government measure to give Y600,000 to send 3,000 emigrants gives each emigrants Y200. This enables them to emigrate to Brazil, as the steerage passage to Brazil costs Y200."

NO COMPLICATIONS

Mr. Tamaki scored the opinion that Japan's emigration to South America if encouraged will ultimately face the same complications as now observed in the United States.

"I am not inclined to share that view," he said. "Brazil is a large country with a limited population. They want labor. Besides, Brazil is still young as a country. The people over there resemble the Japanese in physiognomy. In short, things are quite different in that country compared with America.

"I do not know how many Japanese will emigrate to Brazil next year. It will depend on the subsidy the Government gives us. There will be as many Japanese desiring to go there as can be wished, but the trouble is lack of money."

AMERICA LEADS WORLD IN TIN CONSUMPTION

United States Uses About 60 Per Cent. Of The World's Production

A constituent of bronze employed by tool and munition makers at the dawn of recorded history, tin now finds its most extensive service in the manufacture of the tin can. It has however, lost nothing of its ancient usefulness to the manufacturer of implements of war and peace. In brass and bronze, in bearing metals and solder, one way or another, tin forms a part of almost every piece of machinery now manufactured. Familiar employments are in the production of roofing, of the collapsable tubes in which toilet preparations are marketed and the foil wrappings of chocolate and chewing gum. Less obvious is its employment in the manufacture of white enamel and of silk textiles. In many other industries the use of tin, though not large, is essential to operation.

It is shown in a survey of the industry by the National Bank of Commerce that the United States now consumes about 60 percent of the world output of tin. In 1917, when a record was kept of the quantities employed by various industries in this country, 36 percent of the tin used went into the manufacture of tin plate and terne-plate, the raw material for tin cans and tin roofing, says the survey. Another 22 percent was used in making solder, 14 per metals and 6 percent in brass and bronze, the balance being distributed among widely varied uses.

FIRST IN MANUFACTURES

"The heavy tin consumption in the United States," says the bank, "results from its position as the greatest manufacturer of tin plate, a rank gained within recent years. For centuries tin has been used for a protective coating for iron and steel and other metals, as such coating protects against rust as is unaffected by fruits and foods. The modern tin-plate industry, however, is a comparatively recent development, dating from about 1870. Until about 1890, Great Britain had practically a complete monopoly of the industry, but since then American output has grown with great rapidity.

"According to present estimates, the tin plate output of the United States in 1922 was larger than the total world output in 1910. This country has been a net exporter of tin plate since 1911. While net exports have grown from 106,000,000 pounds in that year to 579,000,000 pounds in 1918, and 256,000,000 pounds in 1923, the home market is the chief reliance of the industry. Even under the impetus of war time requirements abroad, not more than one-fifth of domestic production was exported. In 1923, exports amounted to but little more than 8 percent of production for the year. As already intimated, the bulk of tin plate is used in the manufacture of cans, which are really made of steel coated with a thin layer of tin.

"Terne-plate"—commonly called roofing tin—its made in the same way as tin plate except that the coating consist of a mixture of tin and lead ordinarily containing about 70 percent tin. Of the total American output of tin and terneplate, about 90 percent is tin plate.

"The production of tin is now largely centered in non-industrial countries, while it is consumed by the great manufacturing countries. The United States consumes two-thirds of the world's output and produces practically none, while Asia produces more than 60 percent but demands little for its industries.

"The richest known deposits of tin begin in Southern Siam and extend southward through the Malay Peninsula into Banka, Billiton and Singkep, islands of the Dutch East Indies. Bolivia situated on the opposite side of the globe but in the same relative position as the East Indies, is the outstanding producer of tin in the new world. Other important sources of the world tin supplies are China, Nigeria and Australia.

WALES AN OLD PRODUCER

"Cornwall, in Wales, which for centuries was the chief source of supply, reached its maximum production in 1871 with around 10,000 tons. Within recent years exhaustion of its riches deposits and the invasion of world markets by tin from Southern Asia and Bolivia have put the Cornwall mines practically out of business. Operations can not be carried on profitably except when the price of tin is abnormally high. Open cut mining in Malaya rendered deep lode operations in Cornwall too expensive for successful competition in the markets of the world. By 1923, production in Cornwall had dwindled to 780 tons. Thus the shipments of tin from the Island and Banka beginning early in the nineteenth century and the growth of production in Billiton and the Straits Settlements around the middle of the century marked the shifting of the principal source of the world tin supply from the British Isles to the Far East. As a producer of tin ore the Federated Malay States is now the largest factor. Bolivia holds second place with Banka third in importance.

"Although "Straits' tin is a standard product in the world market, practically no tin ore is actually mined in Straits Settlements. Straits tin is obtained from the smelting in Straits Settlements of concentrates produced in the Malay States, Siam, Dutch East Indies, South Africa and Australia and shipped from that point to the various markets. Some ore has been sent even from Alaska to the Straits to be refined. The shipping of ore from distant points to Straits Settlements for reduction results from keen competition for ore caused by the overbuilt condition of the tin-smelting capacity of the world.

"The world's annual tin smelting capacity is estimated at about 176,000 tons. Approximately one-third of this is in Straits Settlements, one-fifth in Great Britain, and about one-sixth in the United States. Other plants of importance are located in Banka and Billiton, Chile and Bolivia, Germany and China.

"Summarising the present situation, world consumption, since the depression of 1921, has somewhat exceeded the prewar level. Production is still below 1913 output. The older producing areas of the British Empire have felt the decline in production most strongly, while newer low cost areas have tended to increase their output. Even in the older districts, however, many producers have succeeded in reducing costs to within measurable distance of the prewar figures. Meanwhile, with the clearing away of excess stocks and the growth of demand for the goods into which it goes, the tin industry is working into a sound position."

The American National Election Today

TODAY the American people vote in the national election for candidates who have been nominated for the Presidency of the United States. These candidates are Coolidge for the Republicans, Davis for the Democrats and La Follette for the Progressives. In voting for President of the United States, the American voter does not vote directly for the candidates, but for presidential electors, each state having a number of electors equal to the total representation of that state in both houses of Congress. The total number of electors is 531, and in order to obtain a victory a candidate must be able to command a majority in the so-called electoral college, otherwise there is a deadlock and no election.

Although all of the recent cabled reports received by The China Press from its correspondent in Washington indicate that President Coolidge will have well over a majority, there is nevertheless a considerable feeling of uneasiness on the part of the leaders of the Republicans and the Democrats that there may be a deadlock which would throw the election into the House of Representatives. If this happened, the advantage would be with Senator La Follette and his party for the reason that the Republicans and Democrats are almost evenly matched in the House. In case a deadlock resulted in the House and that body was unable to make a choice before March 4 next, the United States Senate would then proceed to the election of a Vice-President and this choice automatically would become President of the United States. The candidates for Vice-President are Dawes for the Republicans, Bryan, Governor of Nebraska, for the Democrats and Wheeler, Senator from Montana, for the Progressives.

In many ways the political situation in the United States this year is similar to the situation which has just ended in a Conservative landslide in Great Britain. President Coolidge is the conservative candidate in the United States while Davis, the Democratic candidate, is also conservative, nevertheless is considered to be more liberal than the Republican candidate. La Follette, the Progressive candidate, in this comparison would take the place of MacDonald, the socialist-labor candidate of Britain. La Follette's appeal during the present campaign has been to the farmers and to the labor unions and while he has disavowed any fondness for the Communists of Moscow, there is no question but that he is looked upon by the business and financial interests of America in pretty much the same manner that MacDonald was regarded by similar classes in Great Britain. Senator La Follette has hardly dared to hope for a majority in the electoral college, but, as our correspondent indicated in a dispatch a few days ago, he has been working for a combination with the Democrats in several States that would throw the election into Congress, where he would have a chance.

In the last national election in 1920, Harding and Coolidge controlled 404 of the 531 electoral votes, while Cox and Roosevelt, the Democratic candidates, had only 127 votes. In the popular vote Harding received 16,152,200; Cox 9,147,353 and the remaining votes cast amounting to 1,111,387 were divided among the Prohibition, Socialist and Farmer-Labor candidates, of which number 919,799 went to the Socialist candidate, Mr. Debs, who at the time was in the federal penitentiary serving a sentence for obstructing the efforts of the United States in the World War. The total vote in 1920 was 26,675,178: this year because of the three-cornered contest and the greater interest, the vote is expected to go over 30,000,000 and especially is this possible when it is considered that suffrage in America this time is universal from the standpoint of the sexes.

In view of the fact that the curious system of electing the President of the United States through the so-called electoral college is not clear even to many Americans, it is of interest here to summarise a recent article on this subject by Mr. Mark Sullivan in the October World's Work. The system, according to Mr. Sullivan, dates back to the Constitutional Convention of 1789 wherein the present form of government of the United States was devised. Says Mr. Sullivan: "Today it seems grotesque, but at the time of the making of the Constitution, there were some who feared and many who regarded it as inevitable that the United States would come to adopt an hereditary monarchy. Some of the Constitution-makers who feared this thought the best they could do was to postpone the event as long as possible. Out of this fear and purpose arose many wild ideas as to how the President should be selected and what powers should be entrusted to him. Some thought the President should be elected by Congress and should hold his office at the will of Congress, and as to the term of the President the suggestions ranged from one to fifteen years, while one powerful member, Alexander Hamilton, thought he should hold office for life."

There were weeks of debate on these vital matters and it curious to observe today that the matter of electing the President by direct vote received very little attention. In those days, even though America represented the latest word in democracy, there was general mistrust in the ability of the people, or to put it another way, there was genuine mistrust of the intelligence of the people in the matter of selecting a chief executive. Since there was mistrust of the people and opposition to leaving it to Congress, they set about finding another way and thus we have the "electoral college." This body, as originally conceived, was to consist of electors chosen by the state legislatures, the number to be equal to the total number of representatives in Congress from each state. The original intention was that the electors should be the most prominent men in the various States who could be entrusted with the vital matter of selecting a President. The idea was that following the national election these men would proceed to the national capital and there ballot for President and Vice-President, but it was found that travel difficulties of those days made this impossible. Then the method, similar to the present practice, was devised of having the electors meet in their respective states and after making their choice, to send the ballot to Washington by special messenger where the envelopes would be opened in Congress and the national choice announced. In 1868 there came a further reform in that the Presidential electors were selected by popular vote rather than by the state legislatures. What actually happens today is that the various political parties set up a slate of electors whose names are printed on the ballots with the name of the party candidate for President and Vice-President. The voter votes for the candidate and that vote carries with it a vote for the group of electors selected for that candidate.

Thus the tendency has been, in actual practice, to get around the Constitution and place the responsibility upon the voter, whose intelligence and fitness for making a choice for President is no longer seriously questioned.

WU VS. FENG

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS:

Sir: The existing situation in China today is such that if you were given a pistol to shoot any one, but only one, militarist, you cannot make a just choice, for all militarists equally deserve the bullet. Sun Yat-sen destroys the South; Wu Pei-fu worships force; Chang Tso-lin hinders unification; now comes Feng Yu-hsiang who turns coat against his master. So, each has his specific crime, it can hardly be entirely fair for any one of us to discrimate against any one militarist, without in the same way denouncing the rest.

Mr. "Citizenship" who appeared in your correspondence column today unconsciously falls into bias in his stand for Feng Yu-hsiang against Wu Pei-fu. "Wu Pei-fu can never unify China by force . . . who knows that Feng Yu-hsiang is not kind to him, because by defeating him Feng prevents Wu from committing further wrongdoings," declares Mr. "Citizenship" and continues, "Feng Yu-hsiang is a savior of China, a Chinese Lincoln, and therefore an exemplar Christian."

On all fairness we cannot but admit to be true all Mr. "Citizenship" writes against Wu Pei-fu. Indeed, Wu is very bad—to use a simple adjective. But is Feng as good as Lincoln, a savior or a true Christian? If a careful comparison is necessary, let us forget for a moment their respective military merits and demerits but take up the question of personality. China, today, lamentably lacks two things: a definite policy and a faithful advocate. On Wu Pei-fu we find these two desirables, but, unfortunately, his is a policy of force. Therefore, Wu is praised for having a policy, but blamed for the nature of his policy. Now, he "dies" for his policy and, in one sense, goes down in history as a political "martyr." What can be said about Feng? Without any real principle to fight for, he cannot do better than imitate Catherine de Medici of France in adhering to one party at a time and running to another at another time, according as egoism dictates. Nobody does not know that this time Feng forsakes his "father" Tsao Kun and his "brother" Wu, simply because Wu once unreasonably deprived Feng of Honan province where he was Tuchun for some time. For this loss, Feng now asks Wu to pay, indeed, dearly. This is an act of pure retaliation camouflaged by the name of a patriotic movement. What is the most regrettable is that he accomplishes the revenge in a base, crooked, shameful and traitorous way. Let us have an illustration. A ferryboat man takes a friend across a river but out of malice aforethought the boatman sinks his boat in the middle of the river and swims away himself, leaving his friend to be drowned. What is the character of the boatman? This is a question for Feng Yu-hsiang to answer. Now, suppose the man thus drowned is a criminal, is it a humane way to prevent him from perpetrating further crimes? Our "Citizenship" will please answer this question. Is Feng Yu-hsiang a Chinese Lincoln? A true Christian? Most emphatically not.

So much for the discussion of personality, now personal ability. If Feng can unify China, let him do it. He has so far issued two circular telegrams revealing his "scheme" for national rehabilitation, and the wording is too highfaluting and two pompous to be free from exaggeration and the platidudinous official can't, of which we have had too much since the formation of the Republic. Stripped of all verbiage, the socalled "scheme" has for its most essential part the calling of a "peace round-table conference." Time alone can tell whether in enunciating his "scheme" Feng merely follows the practice of every militarist in gaining power by cheating the people with empty promise of political amelioration. But one thing at least Feng is sure of—that to "save his face" the warring leader will come to sit together in the conference. What next? To decide who is to be the de jure President? Who? Sun Yat-sen prides himself on his success in changing the name of a monarchy into a Republic and insists upon the first chair. Chang Tso-lin has at present the largest number of soldiers to assert any demand he may make. Feng Yu-hsiang is a second Wu Pei-fu—not in policy but in power. There is Tuan Chi-jui, the leader of the deceased Anfu Club. Curiously they say they will elect Tuan—the old man who has absolutely not an iota of material strength to warrant his ambition. Whether Tuan is bold enuf to accept the cheap offer is another question.

Do the bargainers in favor of Tuan mean what they say? Certainly not, unless they have a change of heart. A change of heart! It is impossible, unless this phrase is differently interpreted by Feng Yu-hsiang who has recently changed his heart. In all probability Tuan will be placed in the Presidency for ex-

Other Views Than Ours On The War In China

THE PROBLEM OF CHINA

(Commercial & Financial Chronicle, N. Y.)

China constitutes one of the greatest, if not the greatest problems of the world today. The late Premier of Japan, Count Okuma, said: "The Asiatics claim the same right as Europeans to be called men, and hold it unreasonable that the latter should have any right to dominate the former"; and China, whether judged by her central position, her age, her inherent strength or her size, for she embraces more than one-fifth of the population of the world, is the largest and most important of the Asiatic group.

In 1900 her ruler undertook to wipe out the foreigners and their religion from her land in the Boxer outbreak. Many thousand Christians were martyred and the end of nearly a century of Christian work in China was believed to have come. But never in the history of Christian missions has there been such advance as in the last 20 years. The old order in China has passed and a new era has opened. Into it are pressing the issues which the war in Europe created, and China is brought to the front, while within she is shaken to her foundations. Her condition and her immediate future concern the world.

The outbreak and extension of the state of sectional warfare which has been in evidence since the fall of the Empire, together with the threatening return of the Manchurian army, increase the political confusion and add to the difficulty of understanding the situation. While there is evidence of a growing sense of national life and an increase of patriotism, the inherent difficulties are great. Graft, especially on the part of public officers of every class, has been so long the practice and so unrestrained, that it has come to be regarded as a matter of course. It is of itself sufficient to make unstable, if not to defeat, any effort at reform in the administration of the Government. It is naturally coupled with a prevailing lack of public reponsibility on the part of individuals, which makes difficult the adoption of new methods of public, or of corporate business, and the filling of positions of trust. Long experience of the greed and selfish struggle for advantage on the part of the Western nations has served to establish existing conditions, to strengthen native traditions of every kind, and to emphasise in the minds of others the lack in China of the background for modern system of Governmental and civil affairs.

Over against all this are the many and outstanding excellencies which the Chinese possess. First may be put their marked strength of individual character. It is rooted perhaps in the inherent strength of the national life, which has for more than 20 centuries suffered defeat and subjugation by other nations and has invariably absorbed her conquerors, adopted whatever of good they brought to her, and then resumed her own strong life, little disturbed and never perverted by her misfortunes. Whatever its source, the varied strength of the individual Chinese, his capacity of self-control, for industry, for loyalty, for unselfish service and generosity, as also his power of mental acquisition and his exceptional commercial integrity, are pre-eminent.

There is already marked evidence of the place China may in consequence occupy in the productivity of the world. Economic forces are irresistibly, though of necessity slowly, changing her into a modern State. She is one of the chief producers of raw material, ranking third in cotton, exporting large quantities of silk, both raw and manufactured, and lately of beans and bean cake. Her coal, iron and steel have large promise. More Chinese than foreign capital is invested in the new manufactures, though of late, with poor trade, it is withdrawing because factories managed by natives are less successful than those under foreign direction. In 1915, when China had 1,000,000 power-driven spindles, Japan had reached that number 20 years, and India 40 years earlier. China has two millions today. Since taking over Shantung from the Japanese her management of the docks at Tsingtao has proved inefficient and the young foreign trained Chinese have been crowded out of office as soon as possible. On the other hand, the streets of the city and outlying roads are reported in good repair; forests were never in better condition, and policing is efficient. The railroad is earning a fair profit, after paying heavy charges to Japan, because many of the foreign trained Chinese employees are retained by the Chinese managing director, who was educated in the Harvard School of Business Administration.

China was the first nation to use paper money, but the Government has never had the power to make its notes pass current. She is burdened, in consequence, with many kinds of currency with constantly changing value. She has a relatively small public debt, only about $5 per capita, because the people will consent to pay but very few taxes. Her central Government is run chiefly on foreign loans, today hard to get. She now faces the necessity of accepting modern business corporations and methods of finance and accounting, as also of changing the form of her alphabet and of revising the methods of taxation and revenue. The sense of her weakness and her needs is forced upon her.

The West today is dominant. Its science, its physical prowess, its machinery and skill she recognises, but she does not think less of herself. The Washington Conference made possible equal opportunity among Western Powers; for her China meant freedom from "spheres of influence," special treaty rights, control of privileges and extra-territoriality. Her recent compact with the Soviet Government of Russia was largely to bear witness to this. She looks for new appreciation of her contribution to civilisation and the revival of her literature and her art. Western civilisation has been disturbing to both, but even Western commercial penetration has not "sunk beneath the cuticle of her compradores and middle men"; is the testimony of those who know. Her strength lies in her way of thought, her settled habits, her language, or, in a word, in herself, of which she is fully conscious.

The question before us is what can supply primarily an unselfish approach. Outside intercourse from the beginning has been generally forced upon her and has been so invariably in pursuit of gain that even ministers of religion, from the earliest to those of today, have encountered the suspicion of having this object. Indeed, in the face of the Christian achievement, of the devotion, the sacrifices, and even the accepted martyrdoms of the recent century, and the unparalleled benevolences of the decades now upon us, the accusation of this as their constant practice, even their real business, is not thought too preposterous for loud asseveration in journals published here at home. We have, then, the task of still approaching China and the Orient with care to prove that we have no selfish and unworthy aim. The influence of personal character rates as high in China as it does elsewhere; perhaps in view of present conditions it stands high. Our Government has certainly won such a position. Now that China's need of both foreign capital and Western men of enterprise and wisdom in every line of activity is great, the demand for exceptionally high grade men is pre-eminent.

The basic principles of our civilisation rather than its details are needed. The East has its own contribution to make to human progress; and China has every right to look for a new and better appreciation than she encountered in modern times. In a day when America was unborn, and Europe was in decay in her older, and was barely begun in a new, civilisation, China was far advanced. Indeed, the appearance of her rich and amazingly beautiful fabrics gave to Europe its first conception of them; as her invention of printing, of gunpowder and of art as applied to daily life inspired Europe to new attainment and furnished new models.

We are struggling with the question of our relation to other nations in the new conditions of today. If we are to save "sovereignty" from being the doctrine of selfshness, and to keep "influence" from being either a confession of weakness or a cover for taking advantage of future opportunity, China, in the hour of her need, and the individual Chinese in his struggle to get food and the conditions of a larger life for himself and his children, while he holds fast the tradions of his family and his home which are so dear to him, offer us our opportunity. Despite grievous mistakes, we have made a good beginning; we have won a fair reputation. Leading business men are opening the way. A multitude of choice young American college men and women are already in China, rendering splendid service. It remains only for our legislators to take no backward step, and for our people to understand that the race question which in one form or another is ever with us, is the one upon which the future turns, and every opportunity to free ourselves of prejudice and be in any way helpful is a privilege and a duty. Dealt with by us as at times in the past, and by others continually, it may be a tragedy.

"The history of peace is the history of the intercourse of nations" is the emphasised historical truth today. Civilisation means the peaceful co-operation of many and the sharing of ideas no less than of opportunity by one race with another. The existing barriers and the long struggle show how difficult is the task.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

the girl, forgiving her anything and everything, he spends money lavishly on the young lassie but is penurious as far as his wife is concerned.

There are many husbands and fathers of that kind.

Consequently, there are many sorrowing wives.

Just because a father loves a daughter is not a reason for loving his wife less.

Each should have an equal importance in his heart.

Most mothers would be willing to sacrifice everything for the daughters so that they may be given more privileges, a better education, more comforts and attention. But wives do not wish to be deliberatly set aside by their husbands.

The wife and mother should never be made to feel that she is of secondary importance in the family.

Equal kindness and liberality should be a man's rule with wife and daughter, with balance of attention given to the mother's side, since ordinarily she has not as long to live and enjoy pleasures.

pediency—only to be displaced in turn. Then Feng Yu-hsiang will have another coup d'etat, for he has such experience. Two former presidents passed under his hands in exactly the same way, and who knows history will not repeat itself? Feng Yu-hsiang has the credit of establishing the "law" to decide the fate of the President. Any President-to-be must be very careful so as not to be a puppet. If Tuan is not a safe timber to be the President, who is? Then the militarists will fight it out, until the strongest emerge to survive. But as no one can ever be the strongest the insensate fighting must continue forever. Fighting! Fighting! Fighting! Eternal curse on the nation! Who is to blame?

After all, as things are now, there can hardly be any way out. It is a foolish hope that a heaven-sent savior will be found among the militarists, who have not been educated to know what it is to save a country. Nothing whatever can be accomplished, so long as the militarists are at the helm of the government. The people must have their day! They must rise up to make a clean sweep of militarism of any brand and type! They must by themselves reorganise the country all over again—by any way, any means, even by a revolution!

Yours sincerely,

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

"Pinkneyville," said Hiram Brewster, "has a problem that is tough,
And already the campaignin' is beginnin' to be rough;
When Joe Hobbs came out for marshal, sponsored by the G.O.P.,
Things looked rosy, but at present everybody's all at sea.

"People smiled when Henry Tuttle, who's a rock-ribbed Democrat,
Started out as Joe's opponent, claimin' Joe was old and fat—
Fact is Joe is less than fifty; meb-by just a trifle stout—
But it ain't them circumstances that the row is all about.

"Henry's wife was in a scandal six or seven years ago;
Got divorced, which made the women line up solidly for Joe;
All our nice old maids got busy runnin' Mrs. Tuttle down,
And it looked as though they'd force her to pack up and leave the town.

"Joe was sweepin' all before him—gettin' stronger every day
Till his wife went to the city; then the dickens was to pay;
Relatives, it seems, persuaded her to let them bob her hair—
Now the town is full of scandal; we are all up in the air.

"First the women got excited and said things I can't repeat,
Then the men joined in the racket, both at home and on the street;
There has been some scattered fightin,' the whole town is boilin' hot,
And if Joe should get defeated Pinkneyville would go to pot!"

The Smartest Fringe of the Season Shows Knotted Design at the Top

Heavy fringe seems to have been abandoned by the upholsterers and interior decorators only to be taken up fervidly by the dressmakers. For the sort of fringe that is smartest at the present time is knotted heavily at the top—the sort that used to be fastened around the bottom and hang from the arms of stuffed chairs.

The sketch shows a dinner gown of burnt russet satin crepe, used dull side out, with matching fringe around the sleeves and in panel effect on the skirt.

One of the smartest models in evening frocks of the present autumn consists of the most severely simple slip of satin or georgette. It is sleeveless, fairly low-necked, and made perfectly plain to the hips, where a wide fringe is attached beneath an ornamental girdle. The fringe is usually tied into knots at the top, making a pattern for a few inches and then hanging straight to the hem of the skirt.

Some of the long tunics are fringe trimmed. One of brocaded velvet has long panels at front and back. Others have the fringe arranged at either side, but not at back or front.

Uncut fringe is something of a novelty and is applied to some of the new frocks with a knotted border at either side. Narrow fringe has its appeal no less than wide fringe, and is used effectively for edging sleeves, and on one coat frock is used the entire length of the opening—from chin to hem.

Scarfs of all sorts still carry much fringe—silk fringe, ostrich fringe and fur fringe. Monkey fur, you know, has been revived in Paris, and is used as fringe, sometimes white monkey, sometimes black monkey, and sometimes monkey fringe dyed to a preposterous scarlet or green. For evening scarfs long uncurled fringe like ostrich flues are still much admired.

ONCE UPON A TIME

In ancient Rome parents began looking about for a husband for a daughter as soon as she had reached thirteen. If at twenty she had not been married and become the mother of legitimate children she was considered much neglected. Marriages were always arranged by parents or "marriage brokers," and it has been pointed out that in Latin there is no equivalent to the modern English word to "court" or "woo."

THE WAY WITH HAIR

A few years ago nobody wanted to have hair that looked glossy. The ambition of the fastidious woman was to keep her hair so light and fluffy that it simply couldn't show any natural gloss. Women stood in fear of having hair that looked greasy. They even powdered it to keep away the gloss. Now glossy hair is in fashion. They use brilliantine and other substances to make it shine, and one expert hairdresser advises her customers to provide themselves with little Japanese silk pads with which to rub the hair thoroughly after it has been thoroughly brushed.

Mother's Advice
MOTHER'S final advice to her daughter is indeed a wise one. Mother knows the trouble ahead of her daughter if she fails to keep her health. So, she reminds the young bride not to forget the compound, which helped her through many a trying period and has kept her vigorous and well.
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been recommended by one woman to another for many years.
If you have that depressed sensation—if you are nervous or run-down—if your complexion is ruined periodically, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will quickly restore you to normal.

Maclaren Tells His Own Story Of World Flight

Squadron-Leader MacLaren, Flying Officer Plenderleith, and Sergeant Andrews arrived here from Canada by the Montclare after months' absence, writes the Liverpool correspondent of the London Times. All three were bronzed and well. Mrs. MacLaren met her husband on board the Montclare and traveled with him to London.

I obtained from Squadron-Leader MacLaren the following statement on his attempted world flight.

"The effort was on my part a joyride pure and simple, and should be regarded in no other way. It was begun just as one might take a motor ride, and from my standpoint as a flying officer was just a 'busman's holiday.' I had no help from the Government. The thing was unofficial in every way. It was my idea of a holiday, and I would have taken Mrs. MacLaren with me if it had not been for the fact that it was attempting something slightly more dangerous than the normal in some respects. With the Vickers-Napier Vulture amphibian I have no fault to find. The machines I used flew magnificently all the time except for the first two breakdowns, and I would choose another Vickers-Vulture machine without question if I were going to attempt the thing again.

THE ROUTE SELECTED

"As to the route we selected, I consider there is no other possible route for a round-the-world flight, and I should follow it again if the attempt were repeated. Any other crossing of the Pacific involves at least 2,500 miles of open sea to Honolulu, and the risks of traversing such a distance without the possibility of landing are too great. An all-British route is impossible. One could not pick one's way across the Pacific, landing at places within the Empire, without having to cross even wider spaces of oceans."

I asked Squadron-Leader MacLaren whether, in view of the result of the two efforts, he considered that the Americans had made the better choice in selecting the westward instead of the eastward course round the world. He replied:

"From the navigation point of view I think experience has shown that the westward direction is the better, but I still hold that in regard to winds and weather, the eastward course is the better, and at present I see no decisive reason, if another attempt were made, for altering, in this respect, the course that I followed."

Squadron-Leader MacLaren, speaking of his companions, said: "Plenderleith and Andrews were extremely efficient the whole way through. I could not have had better companions and helpers. They are just as disappointed as I am that the thing did not come off." In response to a remark about the persistent ill luck which attended his efforts, he said: "Naturally I wanted to finish the game I was playing, but I was held up by nothing whatever except fog. People in this country have no idea what a fog in the Bering Sea is like. It is so thick that you can not see any distance into it at all, and when you are in it you find the water is streaming into your eyes, and it is impossible to wear goggles, and, without the goggles, you also can not see. It may sound a small obstacle, but it is fatal to a flying machine. I have seen the smoke and masts of a ship above the fog and the hull has been absolutely invisible.

"It was the fog brought us down, and it was the state of the sea and its effects upon the machine—it was this and this alone, occurring where it did—that put an end to the flight. Anywhere else almost we might have expected to get to shore and wait for repairs, as we had done before.

What happened was that we were steering for the island of Nikolski, in the Komandorski Islands, off the coast of Kamchatka, and that we narrowly escaped colliding in the fog with the cliffs of that island. I don't think we were 50 feet off when we first saw them, and in the fog an instant choice had to be made between trying to land on the island and coming down on the water. I decided for the water, and the water was so rough that immediately the machine touched the surface the wing tips were smashed and we could not go on. All we could do was to taxi about until we could effect a landing. It happened at 10.55 in the forenoon. There was a small Russian settlement on the island and they received us very well. The island is under the control of the Soviet Government. The islands had a wireless station, and they let us use it to try to pick up the Thelepval, which we knew was somewhere about looking for us, and we were fortunately able to get in touch with her without delay.

The vessel picked us up very soon afterward. She also took on board the machine which I was able to land in Canada, and it is coming home, though it was not with us on the Montclare. The hull is undamaged, and I feel sure the engine is all right and will be workable."

NO CRITICISM

Referring again to the final accident he said: "If the sea had kept as it was two hours before we came down we should not have had the mishap with the wing tips and could have continued the flight as soon as we could see the way. We attribute our stoppage to fog solely and entirely, and the abandonment of the flight to the damage that was done by the heavy seas as we drifted and the fact that such damage was irreparable at that spot. We were only about five feet above the water and in flight when we perceived the cliffs of the island, and had to choose between running into it and coming down on the water. I thought the least risk was in coming down on the water, but I have told you what happened. But for the breaking of the wing tips we made an excellent landing. There was no getting over the disaster, as the place was so out of the way. If there had been any facilities I could have repaired the machine but I had no spare wings. I should have had to send to Canada to get them, and there was no possibility of doing that."

He had no point of criticism to suggest with regard to the laying of petrol stores and other arrangements. He thought all the arrangements had worked out admirably, and that the plans laid could not have been better devised.

YOREFUL versus AWFUL!

By JOHN BARRYMORE

1824 "The Beau Brummel" Age	1924 The Business Man's Age
Elegant beaux and gracious maids	Short-haired flappers
Lydian strains and minuets	Crashing jazz and shimmy-craze
Golden fragrant liqueurs	Prohibition and wood alcohol
"To the Ladies Fair!"	"To the Almighty Dollar!"
Feather quills and billets-doux	Dictaphones and "wrong number"
Courtliness and deference	"Watch your step!"
Sedan chairs and post chaises	Subways and airplanes
Brocades, silks and satins	Soup and fish, serges and tweeds
Ruffles, laces and furbelows	Stiff collars and boils
Perfume, curls and power.	Witch hazel and hair-restorers.

Living in the days of yore, as I have in my character of "Beau Brummel," has brought forcibly before me, on a canvas vividly painted, the overwhelming contrast of life a hundred years ago and today.

A hundred years ago! The thought opens the door to a vision of tender romance and masculine elegance that holds untold charm for me, and because I have always longed to dream "true" and really live a century ago, I felt every happiness, hope and sorrow of "Beau Brummel" deep down in the secret places of my soul, tasting to the very utmost his flushes of triumph, his conquests and his utter defeat at the hands of Fate.

The glowing colors of the pictures I see! On one hand, the soft rose and silver sheen of the "Beau Brummel" age, and on the other hand, the brilliant orange and purple of 1924.

Arson Charge Is Made Against Three In $6,500,000 Fire

the alleged plot to fire the godown in order to collect the insurance are said to have been worked out. At the last of these meetings, it is said, it was decided that two of the men involved were to hire two other men to burn the godown, the four of them to receive $20,000 for their work.

On the night of the fire, the two men who had been employed for the purpose, are said to have gained an entrance to an adjoining building through the connivance of certain persons. They carried with them five bottles of gasoline in a wicker basket, and proceeded to a dividing wall which was about eighteen feet high. This they are said to have scaled by means of a leather and bamboo ladder which they had provided themselves with. They then, it is said, went to the back door of the godown which they intended burning, filed the lock off the door, entered, ascended the stairs, and taking the bottles of gasoline, scattered the fluid over the stocks of silk stored in the godown and applied a match.

INCENDIARY BURNED

The gasoline flamed up so quickly that the clothing of one of the incendiaries was set on fire. His accomplice stripped him of his clothes and the two of them then made their escape through a gate at the end of the alley and proceeded to Soochow Creek, where, it is claimed, they met the two men who had engaged them. All four then watched the fire from this point until daylight, when they went first to the home of one of the men and then to a teahouse, where they were to receive their money.

Some hours later, two of the principals in the affair are said to have arrived at the teahouse. One of them had $2,000 which he is said to have divided by giving each of the four men $400, a watchman $200, and a ricsha coolie $200. One of the men then left for Soochow, where he was joined later by the other three. Then they went to Hangchow, but later all returned to Shanghai.

After the insurance claims were paid, it is said, the incendiaries were refused balance of the $20,000 which they had been promised, with the exception of $4,000 which was distributed in a hotel room on Sept. 8, 1920. Since then, one of the men had also been receiving various sums ranging from $5 to $100. The ultimate revelation of the alleged conspiracy is said to have resulted from dissatisfaction over failure to receive the sums promised.

LITTLE SALVAGE

The godowns involved in the fire were located at Nos. 1, 4, 5, 60 and 61 North Thibet Road and Nos. 62 and 64 Soochow Road. Practically all of them were destroyed by the flames, the Settlement fire brigade on its arrival at the scene at 2:15 o'clock on the morning of March 11 finding the godowns a mass of flames, and with difficulty controlling the spread of the fire to adjoining property.

Stored in the godowns at the time were chiefly silk and silk cocoons. It was estimated at the time that between 3,000 and 3,500 bales of steam filature silk were destroyed, practically one-half the export silk stocks then in Shanghai, in addtion to between 25,000 and 30,000 piculs of cocoons. The total loss in the fire was said to have been more than three times the total losses in all fires in the Settlement during the eight preceding years.

FRIENDSHIP OF CHINA DESIRED BY BARON OKURA

Aged Capitalist Announces Intention To Foster Good Relations

Baron K. Okura, in the address he gave at the celebration of his 88th birthday anniversary October 20, announced his intention to retire from business immediately and to utilize his time for the rest of his life in promoting friendship between Japan and China.

In thanking the guests who filled the Imperial Theater, he said that he had planned a more pretentious celebration which would have been in keeping with the manner in which he had desired to entertain his Japanese and Chinese friends, but had had to abandon it on account of blind criticism in some quarters.

The Baron spoke into the hidden mouthpiece of an electric loud speaker, which threw his voice into every corner of the auditorium distinctly. On the stage with him were his wife, son and daughter, and those who answered his address of welcome: Premier Viscount Kato, Sir Charles Eliot, and Mr. Taketomi, Member of Parliament.

SPEECH OF WELCOME

The Baron's speech follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen. I feel grateful to you that you have honored me and my family with your presence at the celebration of my 88th birthday anniversary.

It was a lad of 18 that I first came to Tokyo. I have thus lived in Tokyo for 70 years. I feel grateful to the State that I have been able to live so long, and make a contribution, though small, to the prosperity of our country. It happens that this year is also the fiftieth since I joined my destiny with that of my wife.

I take this occasion to express thanks to the many Chinese friends of mine, who congratulated me upon my birthday. Some of my Chinese friends expressed their desire to attend my birthday celebration, and, according, I made plans for entertaining them properly according to my resources.

OPPOSITION RAISED

I am sorry to have to refer in this connection to the opposition that was raised in certain quarters to the scale on which I proposed to celebrate my birthday. I was accused of wasting my money on extravagant luxuries. Nothing is farther from my mind than indulgence in luxury.

Anyone who knows me and my long struggle in life will agree with me in saying that I am a believer in the simple life and have been practising that mode of living. If I made plans, which some described as smacking of luxury, it was because I wanted to entertain guests from China in a proper manner.

It is my sincere hope that those who condescended to honor me with their presence will understand the spirit that guided me in planning for the celebration of my birthday.

I also want to take this occasion to announce that from today I shall retire from business, leaving all interests in this country to my son, and devote the rest of my life to the promotion of friendship between Japan and China.

While thanking those present again for the honor bestowed on me by their presence, I want to add a Japanese poem that I have composed, as follows:

"Although I am an old man, having completed my 88th birthday anniversary, I am hale and strong, determined to give the rest of my life, which I hope will be as long as that I have already lived, to the promotion of the welfare of the State."

First Day Of Fall Race Meet Triumph For A. N. Dallas And Day Ponies

Dallas Wins Six Straight Races, Five On Day Mounts; Dividend Of $2,625.70 Paid In First Race

Mr. A. N. Dallas and the Day stables were the winners of the first day of the Shanghai Race Club's autumn meeting. Dallas won no less than six of the ten races of the day, and Day ponies triumphed in six. As if this were not sufficient to mark yesterday as a red-letter day, the first race was won by a rank outsider, Black Monday, White up, paying the biggest dividend paid here for a long time past, $2,625.70 for win and $344.50 for place.

Though several of the races were taken at a comparatively easy pace, a few showed very fast going and excellent time. Zouave, Springfield up, winning the Criterion Stakes, covered the mile in 2:01 2-5, two-fifths of a second above the record, the best time of the day. The Shanghai St. Leger was won by Bonnie Scotland, with Dallas up, while another Day pony, Theaterland, came in second.

There was a good crowd present at the opening of the races yesterday morning, which increased to big proportions in the afternoon. With the beautiful weather, and the ground in splendid condition, all the natural conditions were present for a superb meet, and there were some very large fields.

BLACK MONDAY WINS FIRST

The first race, the Royal Navy Cup and Subscription Griffin Stakes, three-quarters of a mile, furnished a totally unexpected win and remarkable dividends. Black Monday, ridden by White, was the dark horse, the rider wearing the lavender and scarlet of the Bramamdo stables. This win made "Blue Monday" a red-letter day for the handful of betters who laid their money on this ebony pony, who paid one of the biggest dividends on record in Shanghai, $2,625.70 for win and $344.50 for place.

Twenty-two ponies started in this race. Riverside Boy, Sokoloff up, took the lead at first, but Black Monday and Title Deed (Brand up) caught up and passed the leader coming around the bend. Black Monday won by a length and a half over the favorite, Title Deed, with Riverside Boy three lengths behind.

The Maloo Plate, over the half-mile course, was won easily by Rayfield, Mr. Heard riding. Twenty-one ponies started, The Koulan being the favorite. Rayfield, however, led from the start, and won by four lengths. There was a close contest for second between Shenkoland, Dallas riding, and The Bittern, McBain up, the Day pony overtaking The Bittern on the home stretch and winning second place by half a length.

The Criterion Stakes, one mile, was won by Zouave, Springfield riding, in a field of twelve, McKenzie, Crokam up, took the lead, with Symphony, Standlight, and Zouave not far behind. Standlight was overtaken by both Zouave and Ataman (the favorite) going around the bend, Zouave forging ahead and taking the lead, with Symphony, Brand up, close behind, these two having the finish of the race to themselves. Zouave won by a length and a half in very fast time, 2.01 2-5. Brackenfield, forging ahead on the home stretch, finished third, a length and a half behind Symphony.

The Maiden Stakes, three-quarters of a mile, was Mr. Dallas' first win, on Booran. Fourteen ponies started. Booran being a strong favorite, and The Young Bird, J. K. Brand up, led at the start, Mudros passing him before the bend. Mudros was passed by Sevre, then Booran and Christmas Rattle (Heard riding), and The Young Bird passed Mudros again. Booran came in first, winning by two lengths over Christmas Rattle and The Young Bird. Chaistmas Rattle beat out the Robson pony by a neck.

DAY PONIES' FIVE STRAIGHT

The Fah Wah Stakes was Dallas' second win, and the first for the Day stables. Thirteen started on the mile and a half course, Borderland, Dallas' mount, being the favorite. Young Grey and Smithfield took the lead, Harbin, with Brand up, being third. Harbin took the lead at about halfway, and was passed in turn by Borderland, who had taken things easy at the start. Borderland led from the bend, with Young Bill, Springfield up, a couple of lengths behind. Borderland won by three lengths from the We Two pony, with Harbin two lengths further behind.

The sixth event was the Shanghai St. Leger, and furnished Dallas with his third win and the Day stables with their second, Bonnie Scotland, a strong favorite, coming through the winner with Dallas up. Five ponies started. At the beginnng Altai, Vida up, took the lead, followed closely by Theaterland and Courtfield, with Bonnie Scotland and New Year Gift next. They maintained the same positions until the bend, when Bonnie Scotland took the lead and came down the stretch well ahead, winning by many lengths over Theaterland, another Day pony, with Maitland up. Altai was third, three lengths behind Theaterland. Courtfield was fourth, and New Year Gift nowhere.

The seventh race, the Eclipse Stakes, showed only three ponies starting for the mile and a quarter, and gave Dallas his fourth successive win and the Day stables their third, with Portland. Brainwave, Springfield up, took the lead almost from the start, next to the rail, with The Red Bird second and Portland close behind. Portland took the lead at the bend, passing both Brainwave and The Red Bird (Brand riding), and won in the straight in an exciting race with The Red Bird, winning by three-quarters of a length. Brainwave was many lengths behind at the finish.

There were sixteen starters in the Autumn Cup, another victory for Day and Dallas. New Zealand won this mile and a quarter event. The Decoy started off well, with Covellite also in the lead. New Zealand came up just before the bend, forging his way to the front and winning by four lengths in a splendid finish. Don Alphonso, Heard up, and White Knight, Springfield riding, fought out a close race for second, Don Alphonso beating out the other pony by a neck.

DALLAS' SIXTH WIN

The ninth race, the Whangpoo Stakes, was the concluding triumph of the day for Dallas, with his sixth straight victory, and the Day stables, with their fifth, Diamondland winning. Nine ponies started over the mile and a half, and Jack Flint, with Brand up took the lead at the start. Upon passing the stand the first time around he was several lengths ahead, but Diamondland came up before the bend, and took the lead, being followed by The Nightingale, McBain up. These two staged a thrilling finish down the stretch, Diamondland coming in three-quarters of a length ahead. Jack Flint was three lengths behind The Nightingale.

The Kalgan Plate, the tenth and last race of the day, showed another big field, with nineteen ponies (subscription griffins) starting. The ponies got off well bunched, but soon began to spread out, and Padborg, Heard up, led when rounding the bend, with six other ponies close behind. Padborg came through a good winner, two lengths ahead of Mustard, ridden by Hauld. The Unsympathetic Bird, with Brand up, fought out a close race with Mustard, losing by three-quarters of a length. Mustard was the second real surprise of the day.

BOUTS THURSDAY MAY BE STAGED AT THE CARLTON

License Expected To Be Issued Today; Fine Program Prepared

This week's boxing will probably be held at the Carlton again, according to information received from a reliable source yesterday. It is understood that the refusal of a license last week was particularly aimed at the parties responsible for the disorder which took place at the conclusion of the Smith-Canion fight, and was intended as a warning to people attending the boxing contests that such outbreaks could not be tolerated.

It is thought that this refusal of a license last week will have a salutary effect, and permission will probably be granted today to the Association to hold Thursday's boxing contests at the Carlton.

It is understood further that the presence of a representative of the Commissioner of Police at these bouts, in his official capacity, is also under consideration, though it has not yet been decided definitely.

EXCELLENT CONTESTS THIS WEEK

If the license is granted this week as expected, local fight fans will have an opportunity to see a couple of splendid bouts at the Carlton, as Alberto is booked to fight Benny Forral and Folyano to meet Felipe Flores, there being two main events of twelve rounds each. How long these bouts will go is of course questionable, as Alberto has a punch something like the kick of a mule, while Folyano is also a boy who can deliver a kayo. Both of these Filipino boys are clever, but they will be outweighed by the local youngsters, and it seems likely that the fights will be two of the best staged here.

Alberto will be remembered as the boy who kayoed Folyano in their first fight here, and last week knocked out Peralto, who was meat for the husky southpaw. Benny Forral is clever, but whether he can stand up against this other boy is another question. He has several pounds on him, however, and something in height and reach, so it should be a very even fight, with a possible kayo as a result.

Putting Folyano against Flores also looks good. Folyano kayoed Pete last week, and Pete put up a dandy exhibition with Felipe the previous week, so this Thursday's contests will be marked by a real scrap between these two boys. Both of them can fight, and it is understood that everyone is going to do his best this week to make it a big night at the Carlton if, as is expected, the bouts get back there again next Thursday.

Men's Hardcourt Doubles

Canavarro and Toussaint beat Loonis and Tang in two straight sets 6-4 and 6-1, while Noguchi and Hisai defeated Khrenoff and

J. B. FERRIER WINS CHINA GOLF TITLE WITH STEADY PLAY

Shanghai Golf Club Star Low Man, With Budd Close Second

Mr. J. B. Ferrier was the winner of the first golf contest for the Amateur Championship of China, held at the Kiangwan course Saturday and Sunday last. In Saturday's play, which was reported in Sunday's paper, Mr. Budd was low man, with two scores of 77 for a total of 154, with Mr. Ferrier second with 77 and 78, and when yesterday's play started the main contest was expected to be between these two local stars, though two visitors, Mr. Ferguson of Hongkong and Mr. Akaboshi of Japan, were in the running, the former having made the lowest score of the first day, 75.

Mr. Ferrier took the lead in yesterday morning's play, making the first nine holes in 35, totalling 73 for the entire course. Mr. Budd took a 77, which cost him the match, scores being equal in the afternoon's play, with 78 each. Mr. Ferrier's total score for the two days—four rounds of medal play—was 306 strokes, and Mr. Budd's 309.

Mr. Pilcher's excellent play yesterday earned him third place in the contest, his score of 150 being the best total for either day. He was handicapped by a score of 163 in Saturday's play, however, and failed to overtake the other two.

Both Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Shewan, of Hongkong, made scores of 73 yesterday, Ferguson in the afternoon and Shewan in the morning, but unfortunately counterbalanced this by each taking an 82 in the other part of the play. Mr. Ferguson finished fourth, with a total of 313, Mr. West fifth, with 317, and Mr. Akaboshi, who put up a steady and consistent game all through, was sixth, with 318.

Washington Senators Win Pennant In Baseball's Most Remarkable Year

Stanley Harris, Brilliant Player-Manager, Brings Second Division Team To The Top Of The Heap

Concluding the most remarkable world's series ever played, the Washington Senators beat the New York Giants this year by four games to three. Not only the games themselves, but the scandal which preceded them, the stirring struggles for the championship in both major leagues, and most of all the rise of the Washington team from second-divisioners to world's champions, make this year's baseball stand out unique in the history of the game.

Throughout their whole baseball record Washington has generally been a second-division team, frequently tail-enders. In twenty-four years they have been in the first division only eight times. At the beginning of the 1924 season they were hardly thought of as championship material, and many would not concede them a place in the first division. The New York Yankees, winners for three years previously were expected to clinch their fourth pennant, though Detroit was looked to as a possible competitor. Washington was the ugly duckling.

Much of the credit for the Senators' magnificent work belongs to Stanley Harris, their manager, who took charge of them for the first time last season. He is the youngest manager in the major leagues, being only 27 years of age, and one of the five managers in the big leagues who is also a player, filling his place at second base with real brilliance. Last season, thanks largely to Harris, the Senators made a new major league record for double plays, with a total of no less than 182.

THE NEW YORK GIANTS

Against the Washington team were the New York Giants, ten times winners of the National League race and four times world's champions, who had won the National League pennant four years in succession. As in the American League, in the National League also the championship this year was not decided until the last week of play, but the Giants were leaders most of the season in their League, while the Washington team were in the second division until June, when they began to forge their way to the top. Led by the veteran manager John ("Muggsy") McGraw, the Giants were expected to win the world's series again, and went into the games with the fullest confidence.

The New York team was undoubtedly crippled by the loss of several players. Groh, the Giants' regular second-sacker, strained a tendon in his knee about two weeks before the series started, and was unable to play. Frisch, another high-class infielder, had a badly injured finger, but managed to go into the games.

THE BRIBERY SCANDAL

October 1, three days before the world's series started, grave charges against the Giant outfielder Jimmy O'Connell and their coach Cozy Dolan were made, of the attempted bribery of a player on the Phillies' team in the game which assured the Giants' of the pennant. This resulted in both men being ruled out of the world's series, and out of organised baseball forever, by Baseball Commissioner Landis, who issued the following official statement after examination of the charges:

"In the matter of Player James O'Connell and Coach Cozy Dolan:

"Player O'Connell and Coach Dolan, of the New York National League Baseball Club, have today been placed on the ineligible list. This action was taken by the Commissioner on evidence furnished by the confession of O'Connell and the testimony of Dolan.

"It appeared that on Saturday, September 27, O'Connell offered Player Sands, of the Philadelphia Nationals, $500 to throw the ball game, which Sands refused and promptly reported to Manager Fletcher. This was followed by the Commissioner's investigation in co-operation with the officials of the New York club, which resulted in O'Connell's confession, which placed the responsibility of instigating the scheme on Dolan, whose testimony in his own behalf was of such a character as to be unacceptable.

THREE OTHERS EXONERATED

"O'Connell's confession sought to implicate Players Frisch, Young and Kelly, of the New York Club, but their testimony, in the Commissioner's opinion, was a clear refutation of the charges, which, standing alone, was exceedingly unreasonable.

"The Commissioner desires to express his heartiest commendation of the action of Player Sands."

This is the most serious scandal of the kind that has ever come up in major league baseball. The Commissioner, having barred the offenders from organised baseball permanently, continued with further investigations, carried on at the same time — the world's series, but failed to find that any other Giants were involved in this bribery case. Ban Johnson, however, President of the American League, held that the Giants should have been disqualified in the world's series because of this bribery attempt involving two of their members, and that Brooklyn should have been substituted for the Giants in the series. Under the circumstances, President Johnson declined to attend the series.

WASHINGTON GOES WILD

There was tremendous enthusiasm in Washington throughout. The city went wild as a result of the Senators winning the League pennant, and when the world's series opened there only the limited capacity of the park, 37,000, prevented most of the population of Washington seeing the games. Tens of thousands of fans thronged the streets around the park the morning before the first game, and at daybreak thousands were already in line awaiting their turn for tickets, many having waited all night for their chance to get the precious slips of cardboard.

President Coolidge threw out the first ball, opening the series which made the Senators the baseball champions of the world.

GRANTLAND RICE'S REPORTS

In giving the full story of this remarkable series, THE CHINA PRESS is availing itself of the reports of Grantland Rice, the famous sporting writer, who combines with a knowledge of baseball second to none unusual brilliance as a writer.

WALTER JOHNSON LOSER OF GREAT 12 INNING STRUGGLE

BY GRANTLAND RICE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—Eighteen years ago a tall, broad-shouldered youngster of 20, with sandy hair and blue eyes, started east from Coyville, Kansas, with an old portmanteau and a fast ball. Today 38,000 people paid him the homage due to greatness. Among those 38,000 were the President and his wife, admirals, generals, Cabinet members and other officials who help direct the affairs of the Nation. They gave him the acclaim that few in this swift, tumultuous existence can ever hope to know.

So what does it matter, after all, that Walter Johnson, the synonym for greatness in action and for greatness of integrity, lost his first world's series start?

What is victory or defeat in any single encounter to be compared to a whirlwind of affectionate applause that a Caesar would have envied?

In place of kingly captives hooked to his chariot wheels, he came before the big crowd that packed Washington's stadium with the old fast ball that went singing on its way until twelve Giants had vainly belabored the genial autumn breeze, and while they beat him, 4 to 3, in twelve innings of stirring combat, he left the field without a sprig missing from his laurel wreath.

In the heat of action, with the most impressive opening ceremonies ever known in any past world series, baseball came out from beneath its dark shadow to enthrall packed stands with an old-fashioned contest that brought victory to one and defeat for the other by the fraction of an eyelash as the sun went down.

PRESIDENT FORGETS CARES

For eleven innings Johnson and Art Nehf, the cool, game left-hander sent to the front by McGraw, fought out a duel that made even the President forget a campaign was on. President Coolidge and his wife, both ardent fans, sat through this duel enthralled. Home runs by Kelly and Terry in the second and fourth, both line drives over Goslin's quivering, out-stretched hands, had counted the only two runs off Johnson's speed up through the ninth, when a single by Bluege and a crashing double to left center by Roger Peckinpaugh tied up the score.

Johnson went along his way adding more Giants to his strike-out list until Hank Gowdy walked in the twelfth and McNeely dropped Nehf's line drive to center. This was the beginning of the end. After eighteen years of waiting, the eminent Kansan with the pitching motion built from the rhythm of Homeric poetry was merely looking over the fence into the promised land where the gates were barred.

The Giants scored two runs after this on Young's scratch single and an infield out and these were just enough to carry them through in the first game of the series.

For Washington, fighting back with the same courage that carried it on to the pennant, made the most desperate and savage of bids to get back even. It all began when Travis Jackson lost Shirley's pop fly in the sun for a two-base muff. It continued when Harris singled, scoring Shirley. At this point the uproar was beyond the defentive resistance of any human ear. The mighty racket pounded upon the ear drum with the heavy thunder of artillery, and the vocal cataclysm increased as Sam Rice followed with a long single to center.

HARRIS' POOR JUDGMENT

Here came the fatal break of the afternoon. As Harris whirled on his way to third with only one out, Rice, in place of playing it safely with the tying run on third, rushed headlong to second, tearing by the coacher at first in a mad race to beat Southworth's throw that had him headed off by a full stride. It is here the ball game, from a Washington standpoint, blew up with a loud crash. If Rice had only curbed his impassioned enthusiasm to get along, Harris had the tying run in his hip pocket, already for quick delivery. As it was Goslin tapped a slow bounder to Kelly, who came in fast for a great play that nailed Goslin at first by something less than the span of your hand.

The hand-to-hand battle between Johnson and Nehf was worth a cross-continent tour to watch. They were pitching for all they had in their systems before the high life of the Nation.

Just before game time President and Mrs. Coolidge took their places in the leading field box back of a line midway between home and first, as a platoon of infantry and another platoon of marines, acting as escorts, stood at attention and the flag was raised in center field.

For just one moment an autumn breeze came up and sent the flag spinning at full length with its rippling rolls of red outlined against the skyline blue. And then, as the breeze died down and the flag became furled, there was an omen that Washington thought about. The President threw out the first ball and the game was on.

JOHNSON NERVOUS

Johnson, from the start, was plainly nervous. When you have worked and waited, toiled and struggled and fought eighteen years for a certain day and that day finally comes, one is apt to feel the heavy pressure of destiny. Where Johnson was nervous, Nehf was as cool as a wind across the barren lands, cool with a blighting effectiveness that Washington could not solve for a long, long time.

Johnson was restless, wandering about, now and then warming up, over-keen to win for the 38,000 who had just paid him one of the greatest tributes any man ever knew. The hardest thing in competitive sport is to make good for admiring and acclaiming friends.

New Zealand Beats Ireland At Rugby, Six Points To Nil

(Reuter's Service)

London, November 1.—The New Zealand All Blacks beat Ireland at Dublin by six points to nil.

There was incessant rain in Dublin throughout the morning but it ceased at two o'clock. Twenty thousand persons watched the match. The ground was very heavy.

During the first twenty minutes the Irish forwards played splendidly, although they seriously threatened the visitors' line only twice. The "All Blacks" gradually began to hold the Irish pack. Heavy rain again began to fall and both sides found difficulty in handling the greasy ball. The Irish forwards were outweighted and only got possession in about six scrums out of twelve during the first half, but they gave a grand display in the loose. At half time there was no score.

Play was resumed in a continuous downpour. The Irish pack made determined rushes but failed to beat the scientific defence. At last from a scrum in front of the Irish goal, Dalley passed to Cooke, who gave to Lucas, the latter sending Svenson over. Nepia failed to convert the try. Soon afterwards Nepia kicked a penalty goal. The game was finely contested to the end. Result—All Blacks, one penalty goal and one try (six points); Ireland, nil.
